RADICAL DIFFERENCES REAR HEADS AT PARLEY

OPTIMISM,
HOWEVER, IS PREVAILING

JAPANESE, BRITISH AND AMERICAN DELEGATIONS NEAR AGREEMENT

REAR ADMIRAL JONES, BLUFF SAILOR, SAYS IT'S DUTY TO BE OPTIMISTIC

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Geneva, July 19.—Progress toward reaching an agreement in naval limitation was reported by the Japanese, British and American delegations today after their leaders had met and conferred at the suburban villa of Yotano Sugimura, under-secretary of the League of Nations.

Hugh S. Gibson, chairman of the conference and principal American delegate, said that "progress was general."

Despite denials it has become known that radical differences exist between naval and foreign office groups on both the Japanese and American delegations.

ANGLO-JAPANESE PLAN BROACHED

Geneva, July 19.—Another meeting of the executive committee of the naval arms limitation conference was scheduled for today to give the British and Japanese spokesmen an opportunity to explain the latest Anglo-Japanese plan for limitation.

The plan was understood to allow Great Britain and the United States a cruiser tonnage of 500,000 against 315,000 for Japan; place Japan on a parity with Great Britain in submarines, and restrict guns on all except a specified number of cruisers to six-inch calibre.

The American delegation was said to be emphatically opposed to the proposed restriction of guns, and the question of size of guns was believed to be developing into the main issue of the controversy, overshadowing for the present the heretofore dominating problem of total cruiser tonnage.

The conferees still professed optimism, but the real feeling of at least the American delegation probably was expressed by Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, one of the U. S. delegates.

"It is our duty," he said, "to be optimistic until the conference has ended—the same as it is the duty of a captain to stick to his ship until it dives under the waves."

It was believed here that the Americans are willing to give the conference until the end of the week to break the deadlock, and if nothing happens by that time, to admit the present impossibility of an agreement.

A Japanese proposal to permit Great Britain to retain vessels which have passed the age limit without including them in their tonnage was not expected to obtain the approval of the Americans. The thesis that vessels are worthless for fighting purposes 10 or 20 years after their construction was ridiculed yesterday by Admiral Jones.

"In 1893 I crossed the ocean from the United States to Naples on the old Constellation," he said. "The Constellation was built in 1793. It was still a good ship at the age of 100 years. Ships overhauled and modernized after a decade of service are as good as new. I know some that are serviceable after 50 years."

Admiral Jones said the gun calibre proposal of Great Britain and Japan would give merchant marine countries a preponderance of both tonnage and speed. His statement applied to Great Britain, whose merchant marine is the largest in the world.

"We really are anxious for a limitation of armaments," the American naval expert said, "but the plan must be equitable and real."

"TENTATIVE ARRANGEMENT" REPORTED REACHED

London, July 19.—A "tentative arrangement" has been reached at Geneva among the delegates to the tripartite naval conference, it was learned authoritatively today.

The arrangement calls for a total of 1,325,000 tons of cruiser and destroyer strength among Japan, Great Britain and the United States.

The division would be as follows: United States, 500,000 tons. Great Britain, 500,000 tons. Japan, 325,000 tons.

It was learned, however, that any final settlement at Geneva must be Fremont, Neb., July 19.—(UP)—Besting Lindbergh, Chamberlin and Byrd, inasmuch as he carried not a single sandwich, Vernon Dunn, Y.M.C.A. swimmer, established what is believed a new world's record when he pushed a peanut an entire city block with his nose in slightly less than 22 minutes flat.

The combination endurance and speed contest was in payment of a wager Dunn lost to Kenneth Sutherland in a 50 yard swimming race.

"We did it!" exclaimed the over-alled and dirty faced Dunn as he scrambled to his feet at the end of his record breaking push.

"How come, 'we' did it?" queried several of the more than 500 spectators.

"My nose and I," gleefully answered the new champion.

By ROBERT H. BEST

Vienna, July 19.—A nervous peace made potentially unstable by claim and counter-claim from opposing factions, today had settled upon the Austrian capital.

The Palace of Justice was in ruins but the government announced that last Friday's riots would not interfere with the machinery of law. Three courts were to resume sessions today in the former National Bank building.

Both rebellious socialists and the clerical government declared themselves victorious in the internal strife.

The government attributed collapse of the riots to realization by socialists that all revolutionary acts would be met with a strong hand and conquered. The socialists, on the other hand, argued that the masses had won a victory when the government permitted the republican guard, the socialists' police force, to bear arms.

Latest reports today placed the dead from the week-end rioting at 97 and the critically wounded at more than 100. The socialists made the angry claim that police had used dum dum bullets in putting down the mob.

Arkansas City, Kans., July 19.—(UP)—"Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy."

All very well, contends Lewis Linx, Arkansas City theater manager, who opened his theatre Sunday night in defiance of the law. Linx said Saturday was his Sabbath, because he is Jewish and everyone in his employ is either a Jew or Seventh Day Adventist and Saturday is their Sabbath. The Kansas law, which prohibits shows on the Sabbath, does not designate which day is Sabbath, Linx contends.

Meanwhile members of the Ministers' Alliance were holding an indignation meeting in the city park and both the city and county attorneys announced that Linx would be prosecuted.

"Even if the authorities let him run Sunday and make him observe his own Sabbath on Saturday, Linx will be money ahead, judging from this crowd," said one of the many customers in the long line in front of the box office Sunday night.

Washington, July 19.—(UP)—The United States has fought a war every 25 years and "unless human nature changes unexpectedly war may come in a little more than four years," according to Major General Hanson E. Ely, commandant of the army war college.

Gen. Ely made this statement last night at a citizens' military training meeting sponsored by the National Patriotic Council. He said this country needs "an adequate navy that can efficiently protect our citizens and interests abroad, and an adequate army that assures protection to our citizens at home."

Johnson City, Tenn., July 19.—(UP)—Two youths traced down by bloodhounds were held in jail here today charged with dynamiting the home of George Bristol at Gap Creek, near here, and two others were hunted by posses.

Those in jail are Bob and Worley Britt. Their alleged accomplices in the dynamiting plot are Henry Lyons and Lloyd Grindstaff.

Bristol said the four boys threatened him after he had broken up their "petting parties" on his property. He charged they were making his grove a trysting place and resented his objections.

Bristol's home was partially wrecked and members of his family were injured by dynamite he claims the youths set off as a reprisal.

Auggie Pedlar, her pilot and W. F. Molloska, financial backer, accompanied her.

Doctors who examined the body said Rieker had been dead several hours.

New York, July 19.—(UP)—"The object of fishing is to catch fish," a world waiting to hear the latest on the Coolidge worm controversy was informed over the radio last night by Frederick B. Shaw.

Shaw, a fishing expert, had prepared a defense of the president's use of worms instead of flies but was barred from making it over WABC last week. After he had charged that the barring was due to political motives of those who hoped to make worms a campaign issue, arrangements were made for him to broadcast over WGL last night.

Shaw went on to say that regardless of whether an angler uses a bent pin or a $100 rod, the result and the sporting element is the same.

He said Mr. Coolidge is vindicated by the vast majority of South Dakota fishermen, who use a sunken lure instead of flies.

NOT WRITE ALL THEY KNOW
AT ONCE

SHOULD SAVE SOME OF THEIR IDEAS FOR FUTURE

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rapid City, S. D., July 19.—Pres. Coolidge has developed into a good newspaper managing editor since he came out here this summer where news is scarce and newspaper men are at their wits' end to find important information for newspapers.

Voluntarily the president suggested to a corps of Washington correspondents shortly after their arrival that they shouldn't try to write all possible stories at once, and that they should save some of their ideas for future use. He thought newspaper men were writing too much about varied subjects in one story where they might save each subject for separate pieces.

Later one of the correspondents asked him if he had any subjects in mind to aid bewildered journalists who had run out of ideas. He suggested that the federal dry farming project at Armore, which he visited last Sunday, and the irrigation project at Belle Fourche would be ideal subjects for two or more stories concerning aid the federal government is giving to this section of the country.

Furthermore Mr. Coolidge has done all he can to help correspondents who have suffered from lack of facilities. He informed them at the beginning that he would do all he could to make their stay here pleasant and that he realized difficulties in wire transmission and distances out here in the open spaces might cause them considerable discomfort.

When two news photographers ran their motor car into a gateway because they believed they were trying to avoid the presidential car, Mr. Coolidge ordered all facilities of army physicians here and services of his own personal physician, Dr. Jas. F. Coupal, placed at their disposal. A regular army tent hospital has been established near the game lodge so that surgical operations may be performed if any of the presidential party require them.

Mr. Coolidge at various times has suggested good pictures to be taken by photographers and they have considered his suggestions those of an expert in their business.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover is expected to arrive here tomorrow and confer with the president concerning radio and Mississippi flood relief situations.

STATE OF MICHIGAN AIMS TO DISSOLVE RELIGIOUS COLONY

NUMEROUS CHARGES OF IMMOR-ALITY MADE BY THE STATE

St. Joseph, Mich., July 19.—(UP)—First defense witnesses will take the stand today in an attempt to prevent dissolution of the famous House of David religious colony.

After several weeks of testimony and after scores of witnesses had appeared, the state rested late yesterday. The testimony included stories told by numerous women—who had at one time been members of the colony—concerning the conduct of King Benjamin Purnell, bearded leader of the sect.

Numerous charges of immorality were made by the state witnesses.

All of these charges are denied by attorneys for the House of David and they expect to present more than 65 witnesses to refute the charges of the state. One of the principal witnesses will be Purnell.

He has been ill since his arrest, early last fall and may be brought into court on a stretcher. He will appear, however, his attorneys insist. They are not certain how soon they will have him take the stand.

An attempt by defense attorneys to have the suit dismissed failed yesterday. W. J. Barnard of defense counsel maintained that all of the charges of immorality were based against King Purnell and that all of the affairs were clandestine and that therefore the religious colony could not be termed a public nuisance.

Circuit Judge Louis Fead, however, overruled the motion.

St. Joseph, Mich., July 19.—The attorney general's office of Michigan today was charged with being a cat's paw for disgruntled former members of the House of David religious colony," as defense counsel continued opening statements.

"The former members of the colony are using the administrative department of the state as a cat's paw in order to bring about this suit," W. J. Barnard, chief defense counsel, said. "There is a conspiracy. With the aid of newspapers, the state has brought about this suit."

He introduced voluminous packets of letters between attorneys for former members of the colony and the attorney general's office in an attempt to prove his point.

The defense today also introduced 68 depositions.

E. W. Taft of Benton Harbor was the first defense witness called.

350 MILE RACE
BY TRAIN WITH AWFUL DEATH

Chicago, July 19.—(UP)—A 350 mile race with death, by private train from a Wisconsin summer resort, today appeared to have been won. The victim for whom the race was made is Thomas Nathan, 9 year old son of a wealthy manufacturer, who is suffering from lockjaw after stepping on a rusty nail at Eagle River, Wis. He is in a local hospital and doctors say he has better than an even chance at recovery.

The boy stepped on the nail more than a week ago but felt no ill effects until yesterday when he complained he was unable to open his jaws. Doctors were called in and diagnosed the case as lockjaw.

The doctors suggested the youth should be brought to Chicago immediately but it was found no train was available for several hours. Young Nathan's father appealed to the Northwestern railroad and a train was hastily made up.

The run was made in a little more than seven hours.

DENIES RUMORS OF SERIOUS REVOLT IN VERA CRUZ, MEXICO

Washington, July 19.—(UP)—Rumors of serious revolt in the state of Vera Cruz, Mexico, were denied by Mexican Ambassador Tellez here today. He told the United Press the probable source of such rumors was an incident of 10 days ago when a junior officer named Alman in that state "took to the hills" with about 100 followers. Alman was pursued by federal troops.

State department officials said no Mexican revolt had been reported by American diplomatic representatives.

NICARAGUAN BATTLE

FORCED DOWN WHEN GASOLINE TANK WAS PUNCTURED

Managua, Nicaragua, July 19.—(UP)—Two American airplanes, sent on a reconnoitering trip by Marine Captain Gilbert Hatfield, were struck by bullets yesterday, and one was forced down when the gasoline tank was punctured. It was reported today at marine headquarters here.

Skillful navigation by Gunner Sergeant Albert S. Mansch brought his crippled plane to earth at Ocotol where he plugged his gas tank and took off again. He was next heard from at Estel, where he telegraphed to marine headquarters at Managua that General Sandinos, liberal leader was again attacking Ocotol.

Hatfield was advised that 300 Nicaraguans and one U. S. marine were killed in the 16-hour battle at Ocotol last Saturday, which ended with the routing of the Nicaraguans by five American planes. Word of the new attack caused Marine Major Floyd to leave with a column of troops.

News of the firing on the two American planes and of Mansch's forced landing was brought here last night by Marine Gunner Wodarszky, who piloted one of the two planes.

The aviators landed at Ocotol, where Captain Hatfield had requested them to make a reconnaissance to the northeast to look for Sandinos and his troops.

Near San Fernando the fliers saw a group of men below, and a minute later bullets flew by. Wodarszky circled over the men below and dropped a bomb.

The two planes became separated when they were fired on, and the next thing Wodarszky saw was Sgt. Mansch's plane going down. He learned later that the latter's gas tank had been punctured but that he had made a safe landing and a short time later was up in the air again.

One of the bullets passed through Mansch's pistol holster.

Captain Hatfield, who was in command of the American marines and Nicaraguan constabulary in last Saturday's battle with Sandinos' forces, reported 300 of Sandinos' men killed and 100 wounded. One marine was killed and another was wounded.

A graphic account of the battle was told here today. Captain Hatfield, with a handful of marines and constabulary, occupied a strong position in Ocotol, about 110 miles from Managua. He was well provisioned.

During the afternoon (Friday) he sensed a tenseness on the part of the inhabitants of the town and he became suspicious. A short while later he found that wire communication with Managua had been cut. He doubled his guard and waited.

At 1 A. M. Saturday, Sandinos with 250 of his own men and about a hundred inhabitants of Ocotol attacked the marines and constabulary.

Hatfield withdrew to a prepared position without loss of life. Five of the constabulary, however, were captured.

PRELIMINARY TO PULITZER CUP RACES IN SPOKANE, WASH.

New York, July 19.—(UP)—An airplane race from New York to Spokane, Wash., in which it is expected 100 planes will participate, will be held September 19, 20 and 21, it was announced today.

The race will be under auspices of the National Aeronautical Association.

John T. Fancher, commander of the 41st division air force, Washington national guard, who made the announcement, is leaving New York today for Washington, D. C., where he will confer with government officials relative to plans for the race.

The race will be preliminary to the Pulitzer Cup races in Spokane September 23 and 24.

Twenty-seven planes already have been entered. It is hoped 100 will be entered.

The event, to be divided into two classes, will be open to anyone. Craft of 100 horsepower will comprise one class and 200 horsepower machines another.

Barnstormers and free lances can enter as well as large companies. Major Fancher pointed out, due to the fact that free gas and oil will be furnished by cities along the route.

The race will start at Roosevelt Field, N. Y., the entries in class A, 200-horsepower craft, being sent off in groups of ten at intervals of five minutes. The machines will begin to take off at 5 A. M., September 19.

Class B, for planes of 100 horsepower, will take off after Class A.

All class A planes will be required to make their first half of not less than five minutes at Cleveland. The second five-minute stop will be made at Chicago and the planes will spend the night in St. Paul, Minn. The second day the planes will complete the journey to Spokane, stopping at Aberdeen, S. D., Miles City, Mont., and Butte, Mont.

In addition to control stations, Major Fancher said, intermediary fields will be established at Bellefont, Pa., Bryan, Ohio, Lacrosse, Wis., Lemmon, S. D., and Billings and Missoula, Mont.

Class B planes will stop at Bellefont, Cleveland, Bryan and Chicago the first day, spending the night at Chicago. The second day will take them to St. Paul, Fargo, N. D., Bismarck and Glendive, Mont., where the second night halt will be made. The third day leg for this class will be to Spokane via Billings and Missoula, Mont.

Prizes for class A are: First, $10,000; second, $5,000; third, $3,000; fourth, $1,000; fifth, $500.

Prizes for class B: First, $5,000; second, $3,000; third, $1,000; fourth $500; fifth, $250.

ed several attacks with heavy losses to Sandinos' troops.

After several hours' fighting Sandinos sent a flag of truce and offered to spare the lives of all prisoners.

"The truce will last," Hatfield answered, "only until your white flag is out of sight, and it had better be out of sight quick."

Meanwhile, without suspecting what was going on at Ocotol, two American planes left Managua for Ocotol. One landed in a field a short distance from the town and was almost captured. A native warned the flier.

Hatfield signalled the planes that Sandinos was attacking and that one man had been lost. The planes set out for Managua to give the alarm. Half an hour later five planes, loaded with bombs and machine gun ammunition, took off for Ocotol.

During the bombing the members of the constabulary captured by Sandinos escaped and returned safely to the marine forces; a guard under Marine Lieutenant Bruce captured Sandinos' snipers, and late in the afternoon Sandinos' forces were routed retreating to the mountains.

Brigadier General Logan Feland praised Captain Hatfield and his entire command.

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rapid City, S. D., July 19.—Pres. Coolidge has developed into a good newspaper managing editor since he came out here this summer where news is scarce and newspaper men are at their wits' end to find important information for newspapers.

Voluntarily the president suggested to a corps of Washington correspondents shortly after their arrival that they shouldn't try to write all possible stories at once, and that they should save some of their ideas for future use. He thought newspaper men were writing too much about varied subjects in one story where they might save each subject for separate pieces.

Later one of the correspondents asked him if he had any subjects in mind to ask bewildered journalists who had run out of ideas. He suggested that the federal dry farming project at Armore, which he visited last Sunday, and the irrigation project at Belle Fourche would be ideal subjects for two or more stories concerning aid the federal government is giving to this section of the country.

Furthermore Mr. Coolidge has done all he can to help correspondents who have suffered from lack of facilities. He informed them at the beginning that he would do all he could to make their stay here pleasant and that he realized difficulties in wire transmission and distances out here in the open spaces might cause them considerable discomfort.

When two news photographers ran their motor car into a gateway because they believed they were trying to avoid the presidential car, Mr. Coolidge ordered all facilities of army physicians here and services of his own personal physician, Dr. Jas. F. Coupal, placed at their disposal. A regular army tent hospital has been established near the game lodge so that surgical operations may be performed if any of the presidential party require them.

Mr. Coolidge at various times has suggested good pictures to be taken by photographers and they have considered his suggestions those of an expert in their business.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover is expected to arrive here tomorrow and confer with the president concerning radio and Mississippi flood relief situations.

SEEK TO SAVE HOUSE OF DAVID FROM ATTACK

STATE OF MICHIGAN AIMS TO DISSOLVE RELIGIOUS COLONY

NUMEROUS CHARGES OF IMMORALITY MADE BY THE STATE

St. Joseph, Mich., July 19.—(UP)—First defense witnesses will take the stand today in an attempt to prevent dissolution of the famous House of David religious colony.

After several weeks of testimony and after scores of witnesses had appeared, the state rested late yesterday. The testimony included stories told by numerous women—who had at one time been members of the colony—concerning the conduct of King Benjamin Purnell, bearded leader of the sect.

Numerous charges of immorality were made by the state witnesses.

All of these charges are denied by attorneys for the House of David and they expect to present more than 65 witnesses to refute the charges of the state. One of the principal witnesses will be Purnell.

He has been ill since his arrest early last fall and may be brought into court on a stretcher. He will appear, however, his attorneys insist. They are not certain how soon they will have him take the stand.

An attempt by defense attorneys to have the suit dismissed failed yesterday. W. J. Barnard of defense counsel maintained that all of the charges of immorality were based against King Purnell and that all of the affairs were clandestine and that therefore the religious colony could not be termed a public nuisance.

Circuit Judge Louis Fead, however, overruled the motion.

St. Joseph, Mich., July 19.—The attorney general's office of Michigan today was charged with being a "cat's paw for disgruntled former members of the House of David religious colony," as defense counsel continued opening statements.

"The former members of the colony are using the administrative department of the state as a cat's paw in order to bring about this suit," W. J. Barnard, chief defense counsel, said. "There is a conspiracy. With the aid of newspapers, the state has brought about this suit."

He introduced voluminous packets of letters between attorneys for former members of the colony and the attorney general's office in an attempt to prove his point.

The defense today also introduced 63 depositions.

E. W. Taft of Benton Harbor was the first defense witness called.

350 MILE RACE BY TRAIN WITH AWFUL DEATH

Chicago, July 19.—(UP)—A 350 mile race with death, by private train from a Wisconsin summer resort, today appeared to have been won.

The victim for whom the race was made is Thomas Nathan, 9 year old son of a wealthy manufacturer, who is suffering from lockjaw after stepping on a rusty nail at Eagle River, Wis. He is in a local hospital and doctors say he has better than an even chance at recovery.

The boy stepped on the nail more than a week ago but felt no ill effects until yesterday when he complained he was unable to open his jaws. Doctors were called in and diagnosed the case as lockjaw.

The doctors suggested the youth should be brought to Chicago immediately but it was found no train was available for several hours. Young Nathan's father appealed to the Northwestern railroad and a train was hastily made up.

The run was made in a little more than seven hours.

DENIES RUMORS OF SERIOUS REVOLT IN VERA CRUZ, MEXICO

Washington, July 19.—(UP)—Rumors of serious revolt in the state of Vera Cruz, Mexico, were denied by Mexican Ambassador Tellez here today. He told the United Press the probable source of such rumors was an incident of 10 days ago when a junior officer named Alman in that state "took to the hills" with about 100 followers. Alman was pursued by federal troops.

State department officials said no Mexican revolt had been reported by American diplomatic representatives.

TWO YANKEE AIRPLANES HIT BY BULLETS

WERE RECONNOITERING IN THE NICARAGUAN BATTLE AREA

FORCED DOWN WHEN GASOLINE TANK WAS PUNCTURED

Managua, Nicaragua, July 19.—(UP)—Two American airplanes, sent on a reconnoitering trip by Marine Captain Gilbert Hatfield, were struck by bullets yesterday, and one was forced down when the gasoline tank was punctured, it was reported today at marine headquarters here.

Skilful navigation by Gunner Sergeant Albert S. Mansch brought his crippled plane to earth at Ocotol, where he plugged his gas tank and took off again. He was next heard from at Estell, where he telegraphed to marine headquarters at Managua that General Sandinos, liberal leader was again attacking Ocotol.

Hatfield was advised that 300 Nicaraguans and one U. S. marine were killed in the 16-hour battle at Ocotol last Saturday, which ended with the routing of the Nicaraguans by five American planes. Word of the new attack caused Marine Major Floyd to leave with a column of troops.

News of the firing on the two American planes and of Mansch's forced landing was brought here last night by Marine Gunner Wedarzeky, who piloted one of the two planes.

The aviators landed at Ocotol, where Captain Hatfield had requested them to make a reconnoissance to the northeast to look for Sandinos and his troops.

Near San Fernando the fliers saw a group of men below, and a minute later bullets flew by. Wedarzeky circled over the men below and dropped a bomb.

The two planes became separated when they were fired on, and the next thing Wedarzeky saw was Sgt. Mansch's plane going down. He learned later that the latter's gas tank had been punctured but that he had made a safe landing and a short time later was up in the air again.

One of the bullets passed through Mansch's pistol holster.

Captain Hatfield, who was in command of the American marines and Nicaraguan constabulary in last Saturday's battle with Sandinos' forces, reported 300 of Sandinos' men killed and 100 wounded. One marine was killed and another was wounded.

A graphic account of the battle was told here today. Captain Hatfield, with a handful of marines and local constabulary, occupied a strong position in Ocotol, about 110 miles from Managua. He was well provisioned.

During the afternoon (Friday) he sensed a tenseness on the part of the inhabitants of the town and he became suspicious. A short while later he found that wire communication with Managua had been cut. He doubled his guard and waited.

At 1 A. M. Saturday, Sandinos with 250 of his own men and about a hundred inhabitants of Ocotol attacked the marines and constabulary.

Hatfield withdrew to a prepared position without loss of life. Five of the constabulary, however, were captured.

TO BE HELD IN SEPTEMBER, ANNOUNCED

RACE UNDER AUSPICES OF THE NATIONAL AERONAUTICAL ASSOCIATION

PRELIMINARY TO PULITZER CUP RACES IN SPOKANE, WASH.

New York, July 19.—(UP)—An airplane race from New York to Spokane, Wash., in which it is expected 100 planes will participate, will be held September 19, 20 and 21, it was announced today.

The race will be under auspices of the National Aeronautical Association.

John T. Fancher, commander of the 41st division air force, Washington national guard, who made the announcement, is leaving New York today for Washington, D. C., where he will confer with government officials relative to plans for the race.

The race will be preliminary to the Pulitzer Cup races in Spokane September 23 and 24.

Twenty-seven planes already have been entered. It is hoped 100 will be entered.

The event, to be divided into two classes, will be open to anyone. Craft of 100 horsepower will comprise one class and 200 horsepower machines another.

Barnstormers and free lances can enter as well as large companies. Major Fancher pointed out, due to the fact that free gas and oil will be furnished by cities along the route.

The race will start at Roosevelt Field, N. Y., the entries in class A, 200-horsepower craft, being sent off in groups of ten at intervals of five minutes. The machines will begin to take off at 5 A. M. September 19.

Class B, for planes of 100 horsepower, will take off after Class A.

All class A planes will be required to make their first halt of not less than five minutes at Cleveland. The second five-minute stop will be made at Chicago and the planes will spend the night in St. Paul, Minn. The second day the planes will complete the journey to Spokane, stopping at Aberdeen, S. D., Miles City, Mont., and Butte, Mont.

In addition to control stations, Major Fancher said, intermediary fields will be established at Bellefont, Pa., Bryan, Ohio, Lacrosse, Wis., Lemmon, S. D., and Billings and Missoula, Mont.

Class B planes will stop at Bellefont, Cleveland, Bryan and Chicago the first day, spending the night in Chicago. The second day will take them to St. Paul, Fargo, N. D., Bismarck and Glendive, Mont., where the second night halt will be made. The third day leg for this class will be to Spokane via Billings and Missoula, Mont.

Prizes for class A are: First, $10,000; second, $5,000; third, $3,000; fourth, $1,000; fifth, $500.

Prizes for class B: First, $5,000; second, $3,000; third, $1,000; fourth, $500; fifth, $250.

ed several attacks with heavy losses to Sandinos' troops.

After several hours' fighting Sandinos sent a flag of truce and offered to spare the lives of all prisoners.

"The truce will last," Hatfield answered, "only until your white flag is out of sight, and it had better be out of sight quick."

Meanwhile, without suspecting what was going on at Ocotol, two American planes left Managua for Ocotol. One landed in a field a short distance from the town and was almost captured. A native warned the flier.

Hatfield signalled the planes that Sandinos was attacking and that one man had been lost. The planes set out for Managua to give the alarm. Half an hour later five planes, loaded with bombs and machine gun ammunition, took off for Ocotol.

During the bombing the members of the constabulary captured by Sandinos escaped and returned safely to the marine forces; a guard under Marine Lieutenant Bruce captured Sandinos' snipers, and late in the afternoon Sandinos' forces were routed retreating to the mountains.

Brigadier General Logan Feland praised Captain Hatfield and his entire command.

HEDDA HOYT TELLS ABOUT FLAPPER FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT
New York, July 19.—(UP)—
Organdy frocks of Period type in pale pastel colors are being worn by some of the younger girls for evening dances. Soft orchid, pink, yellow, turquoise and Nile green tones are those usually chosen where the frock is of organdy. The bodice is semi-fitted and of almost normal waist height while the skirt gathers on to this extending to the ankles.
Taffeta in the same shade as the organdy may be utilized as skirt trimming, being applied in ruffles or band effect as a rule.

Some of the younger Misses who are letting their hair grow long again, part the hair in the middle and softly comb it back toward the rear where the short ends are curled into little ringlets and held together by a rhinestone barette. Little bangs are sometimes worn in front when the hair has the center part and is worn flat at the sides of the head. This rather quaint manner of hair-dressing looks very well with the Period type of frock and is especially smart at evening time. It is strictly a youthful style, however.

Instead of the sweater and skirt idea for sports wear, the flapper seems to prefer the two-piece flannel frock without sleeves. With this, she may choose to wear an accompanying jacket of harmonizing color.
The velveteen jacket is worn in many instances where the frock beneath is silk or flannel. One-piece flannel dresses are also popular with the flapper. In dresses of this type the bodice is long and straight-lined,
the skirt joining onto the bodice with front pleats. The breast pocket usually has an embroidered emblem such as a tennis racket, a cannoe, airplane wings, etc., upon it.
A narrow string belt is worn about the waistline. Since these dresses are sleeveless they are most comfortable for actual sportswear.

Washable silk dresses of two-piece type are also in demand with the younger set. Usually the jumper is printed in horizontal stripes with stripes repeated at the hem of the skirt.

MAY RETURN 6 INDICTMENTS IN FLOGGING CASE

Oneonta, Ala., July 19.—(UP)— Attorney General Charles McCall announced here this afternoon that he expects the grand jury now in session to return at least six indictments against persons believed responsible for the flogging of Jeff Calloway.

Reputed heads of the Tarrant City and Oneonta Klaverns of the Ku Klux Klan were among the witnesses summoned before the investigating body today.

Calloway, an orphan youth, was taken to the mountains and flogged because he disturbed a church service. Klansmen were attending, according to authorities.

SAY BIRGER CHUCKLED OVER JOB OF KILLING

CLAIMED TWO OF HIS HENCH-
MEN, SHOT MAYOR
JOE ADAMS

STATE CONTINUES PRESENTING EVIDENCE AGAINST
GANGSTER

By WILLIAM F. SULLIVAN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Benton, Ill., July 19.—Cheered by testimony that Charley Birger chuckled over the "good job of killing" that two of his henchmen did in shooting Mayor Joe Adams, the state today will continue presenting evidence against Birger and two other gangsters.

Birger, Art Newman and Ray Hyland are on trial for killing Adams who is said to have been friendly to members of the Shelton gang, enemies of Birger.

The most serious testimony against the swaggering gunman—who has been given the name of "Machine Gun Charley"—came from former members of the Birger gang.

Clarence Rone, a lanky Kentuckian who was one of the gunmen housed in the Shady Rest Citadel, said that after the murder of Mayor Adams Birger bragged about the work of the two boys who killed Adams.

Measuring Distance With Minutes

HOW far distant is Tokyo? London? Buenos Aires?
Budapest? Belfast? Paris? Distances—in communication—are no longer reckoned in miles. Minutes and seconds are the measuring sticks.

A "flash" from London would reach this newspaper in three minutes—from Buenos Aires in forty-eight seconds.

A world-wide news-gathering organization called the UNITED PRESS makes this possible. There are rival organizations both in this country and abroad. This is a UNITED PRESS newspaper, first because the UNITED PRESS is one of the largest news-agencies in existence with unrivalled facilities—second because its foreign bureaus are in charge of American newspapermen—and third because of its independence from any Governmentally "kept" agency its news is completely impartial and free from propaganda.

For 19 years, the UNITED PRESS has been serving representative newspapers. It was the first American organization to enter South America and today serves ninety-five per cent of the strongest and most widely read newspapers on the southern continent.

The news you may read today from Tangier, Gibraltar, Naples, Brussels, Paris, Geneva is reported by Americans, sent with the amazing celerity great organization makes possible and delivered at your door for pennies.

Speed is "of the essence of the contract" as well as the unfailing accuracy which UNITED PRESS service assures. Look for Managers for the reorganization and minority stockholders who are opposing reorganization were given 60 days in which to file briefs with the commission, and it was announced that final oral arguments will be heard by the commission between Sept. 20 and 30.

AERIAL HOP OF OVER 7,000 MILES MAY BE ATTEMPTED

Los Angeles, July 19.—(UP)—An aerial hop of more than 7,000 miles, from the Pacific coast to Australia, with a stopover at some island in the South seas, may be undertaken about Aug. 1, the United Press learned here today.

"We may abandon our plan to fly to Tokyo and head for Sydney or Melbourne," Theodore S. Lundgren, aviator for Capt. James L. Giffin of Long Beach told the United Press. "We will attempt to break the existing record for the number of hours in the air."

MAITLAND AND HEGENBERGER OFF FOR MILWAUKEE

Chicago, July 19.—(UP)—After visiting with airmen for more than an hour and after having been officially received by a municipal committee, Lieutenants Lester J. Maitland and Albert Hegenberger—heroes of the army's Hawaiian flight—took off at 10:15 a. m. today for Milwaukee.

A convoy of approximately 25 planes from flying fields near Chicago accompanied the two fliers.

HEDDA HOYT TELLS ABOUT FLAPPER FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT
New York, July 19.—(UP)—Organdy frocks of Period type in pale pastel colors are being worn by some of the younger girls for evening dances. Soft orchid, pink, yellow, turquoise and Nile green tones are those usually chosen where the frock is of organdy. The bodice is semi-fitted and of almost normal waist height while the skirt gathers on to this extending to the ankles. Taffeta in the same shade as the organdy may be utilized as skirt trimming, being applied in ruffles or band effect as a rule.

Some of the younger Misses who are letting their hair grow long again, part the hair in the middle and softly comb it back toward the rear where the short ends are curled into little ringlets and held together by a rhinestone barette. Little bangs are sometimes worn in front when the hair has the center part and is worn flat at the sides of the head. This rather quaint manner of hair-dressing looks very well with the Period type of frock and is especially smart at evening time. It is strictly a youthful style, however.

Instead of the sweater and skirt idea for sports wear, the flapper seems to prefer the two-piece flannel frock without sleeves. With this, she may choose to wear an accompanying jacket of harmonizing color. The velveteen jacket is worn in many instances where the frock beneath is silk or flannel. One-piece flannel dresses are also popular with the flapper. In dresses of this type the bodice is long and straight-lined, the skirt joining onto the bodice with front pleats. The breast pocket usually has an embroidered emblem such as a tennis racket, a canoe, airplane wings, etc., upon it. A narrow string belt is worn about the waistline. Since these dresses are sleeveless they are most comfortable for actual sports wear.

Washable silk dresses of two-piece type are also in demand with the younger set. Usually the jumper is printed in horizontal stripes with stripes repeated at the hem of the skirt.

MAY RETURN 6 INDICTMENTS IN FLOGGING CASE

Oneonta, Ala., July 19.—(UP)—Attorney General Charles McCall announced here this afternoon that he expects the grand jury now in session to return at least six indictments against persons believed responsible for the flogging of Jeff Calloway.

Reputed heads of the Tarrant City and Oneonta Klaverns of the Ku Klux Klan were among the witnesses summoned before the investigating body today.

Calloway, an orphan youth, was taken to the mountains and flogged because he disturbed a church service. Klansmen were attending, according to authorities.

SAY BIRGER CHUCKLED OVER JOB OF KILLING

CLAIMED TWO OF HIS HENCH-

JOE ADAMS

STATE CONTINUES PRESENTING EVIDENCE AGAINST
GANGSTER

By WILLIAM F. SULLIVAN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Benton, Ill., July 19.—Cheered by testimony that Charley Birger chuckled over the "good job of killing" that two of his henchmen did in shooting Mayor Joe Adams, the state today will continue presenting evidence against Birger and two other gangsters.

Birger, Art Newman and Ray Hyland are on trial for killing Adams who is said to have been friendly to members of the Shelton gang, enemies of Birger.

The most serious testimony against the swaggering gunman—who has been given the name of "Machine Gun Charley"—came from former members of the Birger gang.

Clarence Rone, a lanky Kentuckian who was one of the gunmen housed in the Shady Rest Citadel, said that after the murder of Mayor Adams Birger bragged about the work of the two boys who killed Adams.

There is considerable complaint being made by people on the north side with nice lawns without fences about the careless manner cows are being taken to and from pasture. This grievance is growing so that complaints will be sworn out against the herders unless it is stopped. A few new lawns with fresh grown grass prove to be especially attractive spots and are being trodden upon and damaged daily.

Measuring Distance With Minutes

HOW far distant is Tokyo? London? Buenos Aires? Budapest? Belfast? Paris? Distances—in communication—are no longer reckoned in miles. Minutes and seconds are the measuring sticks.

A "flash" from London would reach this newspaper in three minutes—from Buenos Aires in forty-eight seconds.

A world-wide news-gathering organization called the UNITED PRESS makes this possible. There are rival organizations both in this country and abroad. This is a UNITED PRESS newspaper, first because the UNITED PRESS is one of the largest news-agencies in existence with unrivalled facilities—second because its foreign bureaus are in charge of American newspapermen—and third because of its independence from any Governmentally "kept" agency its news is completely impartial and free from propaganda.

For 19 years, the UNITED PRESS has been serving representative newspapers. It was the first American organization to enter South America and today serves ninety-five per cent of the strongest and most widely read newspapers on the southern continent.

The news you may read today from Tangier, Gibraltar, Naples, Brussels, Paris, Geneva is reported by Americans, sent with the amazing celerity great organization makes possible and delivered at your door for pennies.

Speed is "of the essence of the contract" as well as the unfailing accuracy which UNITED PRESS service assures. Look for the line "BY UNITED PRESS"

A little after August 1 the prize winners will be announced... and many an organization of women will receive funds, as prizes, for the excellent work their members have done.

Through the remainder of the canning and jelly-making season Great Western Sugar not only will be found in these kitchens... since jelly-making proof has been so well established there... but in the kitchens of more than 2 million regular users who annually, during the canning season, buy more than one billion pounds of Great Western Sugar for the important task of jelly making, canning and preserving.

WHAT IS NEWS?

THERE came to our desk today a pamphlet, vest pocket size, headed News and Progress, Vol. IV of the Manhattan Library, and issued by Bank of the Manhattan Company, New York.

It is full of truths concerning the newspaper business, so much so, that we beg the indulgence of our readers in quoting from a chapter devoted to "What Is News?"

News! What is it? It is the stir of life that marks the difference between a living world and a dead planet. It is the sound of civilization's machinery in motion. It is the speed gauge of progress. It is the background for all thinking, all planning and all knowledge of human affairs. When paper leaves the presses imprinted with the news, it is an inert material no longer but an active force.

Up to within the past few generations, exchange of reports has been chiefly by word of mouth. It was principally for this purpose that men gathered in coffee houses in the cities of Europe and America, and even today the gossip is reasonably sure of willing ears. But knowledge of modern happenings mainly depends upon the printed page. There is a constantly swelling volume of news, which grows with every increase in the range of human activities. The modern newspaper has been developed as the means for its transmission.

Therefore, whatever other functions a newspaper may exercise—advisory, educational, political, social or economic—all are based upon its prime function of reporting the news. If the newspaper have value as a protector of popular rights, it is because it is able to keep before the people the actions of their officials as they occur and thus give the public an opportunity, when necessary, to protect its interests.

Man is today living in an Age of News of which earlier generations never dreamed. He stands on a high mountain overlooking "The kingdoms of the world" and before him unrolls the immeasurable panorama of human life. He sees it in its nobility and its meanness, its triumphs and its failures—for all its life, and the honest mind cannot ignore truth in any form. Science lays its achievements at his feet and even the long-forgotten Past comes forth from its grave for his inspection through the labors of archeologists—all first in the form of news. To this end, thousands of trained observers, writers and editors are at his command whenever he makes a trifling investment at the newsstand.

But news has another aspect. It is that great department of vital, vivid information we call advertising. Advertising started as news. The buying public has come to depend upon the advertising columns for information concerning its material needs just as completely as it depended upon the news and editorial columns of the newspaper for news and views of current events.

Retail announcements, of course, form but one of the classes of newspaper advertising, but they are usually the most conspicuous and they are charged with undoubted news interest. Retail stores are reservoirs into which are poured and from which flow the many products that modern life requires. These are full of change—change in style, material, quality, price and available supply. Prompt knowledge of opportunities, such as only a newspaper affords, affects the plans of countless individual purchasers. They pore over the advertising columns each day.

Without them the buyer and the advertiser would find themselves in much the same plight as were the merchants of New York and their customers during the newspaper strike in that city a few years ago. The local market places were open but the doors might as well have been closed.

MOTORBUS COMPETITION

MOTORBUS competition was held responsible for falling off of railroad passenger earnings of this year and indications are this section of the roads' income will be the lowest in the last 15 years, according to a recent editorial announcement of the Railway Age.

"While freight business continues to improve, passenger business which increased in the early months of 1926, has renewed its decline," the magazine said. "The most marked decrease has been in the southern region where a 15 per cent decline was shown in the first four months of this year."

"In the entire country, railway passenger earnings declined in these months from $329,290,000 to $314,888,000. Most of the loss was in day coach business and no doubt was due to motor competition."

On the Northern Pacific railway we note with satisfaction successful efforts of the railway to secure passenger business for Yellowstone Park and other long haul service. And in the short haul the Northern Pacific is not neglecting the Brainerd Lake Region. Fine rates are made for the summer season lake business. Cooperating with Chicago and Eastern railways the Pi Beta Phi convention was handled in commendable manner, and after the gathering at Breezy Point lodge, some 60 or more Pi Phis were signed for a trip to Yellowstone Park.

If our Lake Region and the Yellowstone Park can continue to be combined in rail circle tours it will be a most profitable thing for Brainerd and it behooves us all to spread the merits of these two sections.

True, the bus seems destined to stay. But there is nothing to prevent us and it means much to us with the great railway shops here, that we strive to increase the business and goodwill of the railway. Next year will see further large conventions brought by special trains from the East to our Lake Region.

At the recent fraternity gathering, passenger agents of the Northern Pacific at Chicago and other points, and men of the Burlington road accompanied the specials to see what manner of service this lake region had to offer and they were satisfied with the splendid cooperation shown by the Brainerd Chamber of Commerce, Brainerd citizens and other organizations, Pequot and the lake resorts.

THE use of "cuss words" is prohibited on the links of the Limes Golf club at Barnsley, England. The strongest expressions tolerated are "dear me" and "tut tut." According to our idea of golf conversation when things go badly on those English links, the "tut-tutting" must resemble the explosive exhaust of a motorcycle. Golf, accordingly, teaches one to contain himself and not slop over with strong language.

A MINNESOTA young woman, the only woman logging operator in the Northwest, wears stylish city dresses, high-heeled shoes and silk stockings, and bosses 100 men at a time. We don't know, continues the St. Paul Pioneer Press, whether she smokes or not, but, being in the logging business, she probably knows how to roll her own.

What Every Girl Should Know

by GISA PRUCHONE

Copyright, 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW," with Patsy Ruth Miller, is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Sullivan—slender, beautiful, red-headed—is a tennis champion. A poetical, spiritual girl is Mary, despite her physical prowess. Her mother died sewing for a living. Her spirit lives on in Mary. Mary becomes acquainted with Wally Mason, a young reporter. Mary keeps house for her brothers, David and Robert. David, the family support, hopes Mary will get safely married; but Mary disbelieves in love. Wally tells her he loves her. She, troubled, says she does not love him. Coming home, she learns David has been in an accident.

"Well Mary, it seems that David's crashing into that car killed Arthur Graham's fiancée."

Mr. Tomlinson had come quite close to her, prepared to catch her if she fell in a faint, which was what he expected of her because it was the way in which all women-folk acted at the receipt of bad news. He put out a hand in readiness and then let it fall in some embarrassment. Young Robert's hold on Mary tightened, and he burrowed his head still deeper into its resting place. Mr. Tomlinson tipped to the door and shushed away Freddie, whose small round face was pressed against the screen. When he returned Mary was still standing as he had left her, and her gaze was fixed on nothing.

"We're sorry, Mary, Mrs. Tomlinson and I." He cleared his throat, and shot a glance at her. "We'll do everything we can—Mrs. Tomlinson's nephew has a friend who is secretary to the Mayor, and if that'll help—No use feelin' bad about it Mary. It's just one of those things that come like a bolt from the blue and hit you—"

"They claim David was drunk while driving."

Inson continued, very earnestly, a bit stutteringly, looking at the girl before him now and then, thinking that the flow of words would soothe her, and numb the hurt. As a matter of fact, although Mary continued to gaze at him, it was only because he was in her direct line of vision and it was too painful to bother changing her gaze. A very long time ago—across the years—it hurt to think back that far—some one else had mentioned that bolt from the blue. Some one—her mind groped mechanically for the details of the incident. It had been so long ago—there had been the rush of night on either side of a car—a little green car and Wally. It was a relief. It had been Wally, of course. He had said—what was it he had said? Again the pain of recalling. "Tell me, Mary—what would you do if the bolt from the blue came to you, and the road was dimmed for a while?" And she had answered cockily, "What would I do? What would I do? I'd leap the chasm, and go right merrily on!" But the chasm here was so wide. It was so tearing wide. To look down into its depths dizzied her. She realized that she couldn't leap it, that she lacked the will to leap it. And why bother at all? It was so restful on the side, with the peace that seeps through pain—

"Well Mary," Mr. Tomlinson patted her shoulder. "Well—I guess I'll be going. It's too late to do anything today, anyway. You go to bed and get some sleep, Mary, and tomorrow everything'll be brighter, you'll see."

"I want to know more," said Mary. She had struggled above the eddies of thought and pain and numb feeling. "Please, Mr. Tomlinson, I must know more."

He gazed at her doubtfully. "I'm perfectly all right. It—it was rather staggering—at first, you understand?" She managed a smile, eager to let him see that she could bear whatever was coming. "But now—I must know everything, Mr. Tomlinson, please!"

"Well, Mary, there's not so much." He drew a chair up for her and young Robert, and seated himself opposite.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL
AT THE AGE OF 83

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oil.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or sour stomach. All children love its pleasant taste.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself how perfectly it cleanses and regulates the bowels of infants and children.

"Well Mary, it seems that David's crashing into that car killed Arthur Graham's fiancée."

Mr. Tomlinson had come quite close to her, prepared to catch her if she fell in a faint, which was what he expected of her because it was the way in which all women-folk acted at the receipt of bad news. He put out a hand in readiness and then let it fall in some embarrassment. Young Robert's hold on Mary tightened, and he buried his head still deeper into its resting place. Mr. Tomlinson tipped to the door and shushed away Freddie, whose small round face was pressed against the screen. When he returned Mary was still standing as he had left her, and her gaze was fixed on nothing.

"We're sorry, Mrs. Tomlinson and I," he cleared his throat, and shot a glance at her. "We'll do everything we can—Mrs. Tomlinson's nephew has a friend who is secretary to the Mayor, and if that'll help—No use feelin' bad about it Mary. Its just one of those things that come like a bolt from the blue and hit you." Mr. Tomlinson continued, very earnestly, a bit stutteringly, looking at the girl before him now and then, thinking that the flow of words would soothe her, and numb the hurt. As a matter of fact, although Mary continued to gaze at him, it was only because he was in her direct line of vision and it was too painful to bother changing her gaze. A very long time ago—aeons ago—it hurt to think back that far—some one else had mentioned that bolt from the blue. Some one—her mind groped mechanically for the details of the incident. It had been so long ago—there had been the rush of night on either side of a car—a little green car and Wally. It was a relief. It had been Wally, of course. He had said—what was it he had said? Again the pain of recalling. "Tell me, Mary—what would you do if the bolt from the blue came to you, and the road was dimmed for a while?" And she had answered cockily, "What would I do? What would I do? I'd leap the chasm, and go right merrily on!" But the chasm here was so wide. It was so tearing wide. To look down into its depths dizzied her. She realized that she couldn't leap it, that she lacked the will to leap it. And why bother at all? It was so restful on the side, with the peace that seeps through pain—

"Well Mary," Mr. Tomlinson patted her shoulder. "Well—I guess I'll be going. It's too late to do anything today, anyway. You go to bed and get some sleep, Mary, and tomorrow everything'll be brighter, you'll see."

"I want to know more," said Mary. She had struggled above the eddies of thought and pain and numb feeling. "Please, Mr. Tomlinson, I must know more."

He gazed at her doubtfully. "I'm perfectly all right. It—it was rather staggering—at first, you understand?" She managed a smile, eager to let him see that she could bear whatever was coming. "But now—I must know everything, Mr. Tomlinson, please!"

"Well, Mary, there's not so much," He drew a chair up for her and young Robert, and seated himself opposite.

"What is this young English society girl that Arthur Graham was going to marry?"

"The same one, Mary. The papers have had nothing else for a week. Yes, a princess or something, wasn't she?" doubtfully.

"I don't know. I didn't bother to read about it."

"Well—a princess or a duchess was what Mrs. Tomlinson said. I didn't bother to read about it either, Mary. But I guess you and I are the only ones that didn't." He sucked at his pipe. "Beautiful, too—Mrs. Tomlinson said. They were to be married in a week."

"It's—it's frightful," Mary choked.

"Well—it's the hand of God, Mary. They can't do a thing with David, though. Don't let that worry you. It was either that youngster or the car, and David thought he could avoid both. Fell—"

"You're sure, Mr. Tomlinson, that they can't do anything to David?"

The sureness, the stolid comfort that emanated from masculinity. She longed to bathe in it.

"Well—they couldn't ordinarily, but they claim, Mary, they claim David was drunk while driving."

Mr. Tomlinson gazed down into the bowl of his pipe, and then from it to Mary. A little glance that caught and held at his eyelids.

"Drunk? She didn't understand, David drunk? But David didn't drink. How very funny, David didn't drink. She told it to Mr. Tomlinson, certain that he had erred some way in his speech."

"But, Mr. Tomlinson," eagerly, "David doesn't drink!" Somehow she felt that this was what had been wrong all this while. Now it would be cleared up.

"Yes, I know. But they don't know that, Mary. They found an empty whiskey bottle on him."

An empty whiskey bottle. But how—oh, how, on David? It couldn't be. And then young Robert spoke up in a small, grave voice. "Don't you remember, Mary? The night that he had his tea in it, don't you remember?"

The whiskey flask they had used for his hot tea until they could afford a thermos bottle! Of course she remembered it, and thought of the change in the little cream pitcher in the cupboard which was to have gone toward the sum necessary for the thermos bottle. But—but, how silly, how silly to suspect David of carrying in it anything but tea! How—how absurd. She laughed shakily, a bit bewildered.

"But how silly, Mr. Tomlinson," she told him. "How—how absurd!"

Mr. Tomlinson cleared his throat. "Well, Mary, that's there's what they call circumstantial evidence." He looked grave.

Mary grew a bit wild at that. "But can't I do anything?" She put Robert from her lap, and came to stand before the little man, her hands clasping each other nervously, one hand pulling, pulling at the thumb of the other.

"Well Mary, That's just as I said. We can't do anything tonight. But tomorrow—just go to bed and rest up, and tomorrow I'll see what can be done. Just go to bed and rest up, Mary, and don't let this bother you, and tomorrow we'll see what can be done."

Mr. Tomlinson patted the girl's shoulder awkwardly, muttered "good night, Mary—now please—hm—please just rest up"—and was gone. He had shut the screen door carefully behind him, and she heard his footsteps down the stairs and across the walk, then silence.

Mary pushed the heavy fringe of hair from her forehead, and was vaguely surprised to find it wet. Young Robert came to her and said, "What are you going to do, Mary?"

His little face was streaked and smudged, and his lashes tangled with wet. He knew, however, did Robert, that everything would be straightened out somehow, now that Mary was here.

"I don't know, Bob. I don't know what to do."

David in prison. David charged with murder. David in prison, behind iron bars. David white and wan with harrowing thoughts of the two whom he had left behind. David with visions of mother who had charged his small self with the care of the two younger than he. David racked by the avalanche that had suddenly slid down upon him, burying him head and shoulders, making it painful to breathe, to live—

"Mary?" Young Robert again, worried by the frowning moments, and anxious for his bulwark, his staunch ally in times of need, to rise and charge upon their common sorrow. This was a strangely white Mary. Where was the laugh and lift of her gay young head, and the eagerness that acted as a buoy to keep her spirit and body afloat? She seemed strangely sunken, this Mary. Sudden, as if something alien had seeped through her veins and congealed into a mass that kept her earthbound.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious,

REPORT DEMPSEY'S LEFT ARM AS INJURED

CAUSES SWITCH IN BETTING ODDS ON BIG FIGHT

WEEK AGO THE ODDS ON SHARKEY WERE AT 6 TO 5

TODAY THE FIGURES HAD RISEN TO 13 TO 10 ON THE LITHUANIAN

By PAUL W. WHITE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
New York, July 19.—Reports of an injury to Jack Dempsey's left arm caused a switch in the betting odds for the heavyweight fight Thursday night between the former champion and Jack Sharkey.

A week ago the odds on Sharkey winning were 6-5 and today had risen to 13-10. The quotation of 3-1 on Dempsey to win by a knockout have shortened to 2½ to 1.

Nothing but bullish sentiments came from the Sharkey camp. The Bostonian and his handlers expressed great confidence.

But the Saratoga Springs headquarters of the Dempsey men permitted pessimistic tidings to reach the betting tickers.

It was reported Dempsey was nursing an injury to his left arm, his principal stock in trade.

The arm, the reports said, was bandaged and a special shipment of antiphlogistine and baking lamps had been ordered and put to work in the hope that any injury would be obliterated by Thursday night.

The United Press was informed by its correspondent at the Dempsey camp that such rumors were "bunk" and were probably an effort to depreciate the value of Dempsey currency so that his backers would be the more enriched by a victory over Sharkey.

"I saw Jack work out yesterday," the correspondent said, "and if there was anything wrong with his arm it would have shown then. It did not."

Tex Rickard also was inclined to discount the reports.

"Dempsey's arm has pained him occasionally," the promoter said. "But it's nothing serious and the fight will go on as scheduled."

CELEBRATE 25TH YEAR OF McGRAW AS GIANT MANAGER

Polo Grounds, New York, July 19.—(UP)—John McGraw's 25th anniversary as manager of the New York Giants was celebrated today with elaborate festivities which brought out Mayor James J. Walker, Governor Alfred E. Smith, Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, Commander Richard E. Byrd and his fellow fliers, stars of the stage and numerous ball players of a generation ago.

The jubilee celebration started at noon with a parade from Times square to the Polo grounds. When the procession arrived at the ball park the paraders found that many of the city's prominent already had gathered to pay honor to the veteran manager.

A game with the Chicago Cubs was on the afternoon program.

DEMPSEY IS READY TO GO RIGHT NOW

LEO FLYNN, HIS MANAGER, CONFIDENT OF BIG FELLOW

DENIES HE IS SUFFERING FROM INJURY TO HANDS OR ARMS

White Sulphur Springs, Saratoga, N. Y., July 19.—(UP)—With three days remaining before his fight with Jack Sharkey, Jack Dempsey today was pronounced "ready to go right now" by Leo Flynn, his manager.

Flynn carefully denied that Dempsey was suffering from injury or serious soreness either to his hands or arms and explained the appearance of the champion for his workout yesterday with heavy bandages on his hands and arms, as merely a precautionary measure.

His sparring partners were ready in ring togs and came forward for a workout, but were told Dempsey would do no more boxing and they could take off their boxing trunks. Stories have gone out, some of which were disturbing, about Dempsey and his arm. But all were deflected and the more thorough-going of those who have been watching him seemed convinced that there was nothing wrong. Dempsey himself was guarded from questioners but he seemed happy and contented—not a bit worried. Some observers, however, thought he still lacked a lot of his old time pep.

One well known sports authority who spent considerable time investigating the rumors centering on the condition of Dempsey's arm, sent word to his chief in New York today that "there isn't a thing to it and you can't deny it too strongly."

Dempsey probably will come to New York late tomorrow for 24 hours rest at some quiet spot near the city, before the fight.

New York, July 19.—(UP)—Jack Dempsey may be afraid of injuring his hands in training but it looks as though Jack Sharkey isn't afraid of much of anything.

In contrast to the careful conservatism in Dempsey's training, Sharkey's camp continued carefree and gay today with everyone fairly radiating confidence.

Yesterday afternoon the Lithuanian sailor who hopes to earn a chance at Dempsey's expense, of meeting Gene Tunney, went through a full program of boxing and gymnasium work, and he never pulled a punch, it seemed. He cut loose a lot of blows at some of his partners, which showed he had plenty of faith in his hands holding out, for they landed with steam in them. Sharkey's managers said he would box again today and that they were pleased with the shape he is in both physically and mentally.

PROMISE OF BEST YEAR IN STORE FOR COUNTRY CLUB

CLUB IS IN BETTER CONDITION THIS YEAR THAN IT HAS EVER BEEN, DIRECTORS LEARN

TOURNAMENTS BOOKED FOR EVERY SUNDAY FROM NOW UNTIL LABOR DAY

The Brainerd Country club is in a better condition this year than it has even been. The greens and fairways are in excellent shape and the roughs are being cut down the second time whereas in the past they were only cut once a year.

The financial condition of the club is also at its peak. At a meeting of the board of directors last evening it was reported that there are 54 paid up members. This even though the year is only half over exceeds the highest number that the club has ever had. The secretary has been busy for the past two weeks collecting the dues and his efforts met with such a degree of success that the board of directors decided last night not to post the names of the delinquent members at this time as has been done in the past, owing to the fact that there were only a few who are still in arrears.

Another feature of the club which shows its growth is the number of tournaments that are being held this year. Every Sunday from now until Labor Day is filled. The tourists are nearly twice as many this year as of last year and the local players are turning out in greater numbers all the time so that viewed from any angle the Brainerd Country club is certainly at its height. The friends of the club are interested in knowing that the Brainerd Country club is today extending an invitation to the Minnesota State Golf Association to hold its next state amateur tournament under the auspices of this club and on the finest 18 hole grass greens in the entire state, namely the Harrison & Start course, 12 miles west of Brainerd.

NORTHEAST WINS CITY FIRST HALF CHAMPIONSHIP

DEFEATED SOUTH SIDE BY 6 TO 1 SCORE LAST EVENING IN REPLAY GAME

NORTHEAST PLAYED GREAT BALL; JARBOE STRUCK OUT 9 MEN, GAVE 2 HITS

Northeast won the undisputed championship of the first half of the city baseball league last evening by defeating the South Side by the score of 6 to 1 before a large crowd at the N. P. baseball field.

Jarboe, moundster for N. E., pitched great ball, striking out nine men and allowing only two hits. He walked only one man and through out the entire game each of his team mates backed him to the best of their ability.

The South Side team entered the fray in a handicapped position in that their catcher, Norman, was on the injured list with a broken thumb. Peterson was forced to fill in the vacancy. Swanson, S. S. heavier, was taken out in the second inning and replaced by Fitzharris who pitched nice ball, allowing only one run.

The high lights of the game follow: Hegstead's stop of Schwindeman's hard hit grounder in the fifth inning; Elling's long three base hit which scored two runs for N. E.; Bedal's two hits, and Peterson's two hits.

Last night's game was a play-off of last Wednesday's game which resulted in a win of 6 to 1 for Northeast but which was protested by the South Side after the sixth inning on the grounds that the N. E. aggregation used a player not eligible.

A baseball meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. at 7 o'clock tonight to draw up a schedule for the second half of the season and handle any other business that may come up.

Enough to make a pipe get puffed up

IF YOUR jimmy-pipe could talk, it would say: "Fill me with Prince Albert and watch me strut. I'll repay you a hundred-fold." No doubt about it, many a pipe has been blamed for things that weren't its fault a-tall. You have no idea how well a pipe behaves on P.A.

On my say-so, buy yourself a tidy red tin of good old P.A. today. Throw back the hinged lid and revel in that fragrance of the world's greatest pipe-tobacco, bar none. Then tuck a neat wad into the business-end of your pipe and light up. There's the answer to every pipe-wish.

Cool as a pound-keeper. Sweet as escape from the place he keeps. Mild, but with that full, satisfying flavor of the greatest tobacco that ever tumbled into a pipe. No matter how wide you open the smoke-throttle, there isn't a stop-sign or a detour anywhere.

Nearby is a store where they hand out jimmy-pipe joy in tidy red tins. My advice to you is to make tracks for there at once. Fill your pipe with this glorious tobacco and get the fun that's due you. No matter what your present program is, try P.A. Give your pipe a chance!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and punch removed by the Prince Albert process.

LEO FLYNN, HIS MANAGER, CONFIDENT OF BIG FELLOW

DENIES HE IS SUFFERING FROM INJURY TO HANDS OR ARMS

White Sulphur Springs, Saratoga, N. Y., July 19.—(UP)—With three days remaining before his fight with Jack Sharkey, Jack Dempsey today was pronounced "ready to go right now" by Leo Flynn, his manager.

Flynn carefully denied that Dempsey was suffering from injury or serious soreness either to his hands or arms and explained the appearance of the champion for his workout yesterday with heavy bandages on his hands and arms, as merely a precautionary measure.

His sparring partners were ready in ring togs and came forward for a workout, but were told Dempsey would do no more boxing and they could take off their boxing trunks. Stories have gone out, some which were disturbing, about Dempsey and his arm. But all were denied and the more thorough-going of those who have been watching him seemed convinced that there was nothing wrong. Dempsey himself was guarded from questioners but he seemed happy and contented—not a bit worried. Some observers, however, thought he still lacked a lot of his old time pep.

One well known sports authority who spent considerable time investigating the rumors centering on the condition of Dempsey's arm, sent word to his chief in New York today that "there isn't a thing to it and you can't deny it too strongly."

Dempsey probably will come to New York late tomorrow for 24 hours rest at some quiet spot near the city, before the fight.

New York, July 19.—(UP)—Jack Dempsey may be afraid of injuring his hands in training but it looks as though Jack Sharkey isn't afraid of much of anything.

In contrast to the careful conservatism in Dempsey's training, Sharkey's camp continued carefree and gay today with everyone fairly radiating confidence. Yesterday afternoon the Lithuanian sailor who hopes to earn a chance at Dempsey's expense, of meeting Gene Tunney, went through a full program of boxing and gymnasium work, and he never pulled a punch, it seemed. He cut loose a back of blows at some of his partners, which showed he had plenty of faith in his hands holding out, for they landed with steam in them. Sharkey's managers said he would box again today and that they were pleased with the shape he is in both physically and mentally.

Dictresses
Perhaps one reason for so many unsuccessful marriages is that very few modern girls can run their husbands as completely as they ran their parents.

PROMISE OF BEST YEAR IN STORE FOR COUNTRY CLUB

CLUB IS IN BETTER CONDITION THIS YEAR THAN IT HAS EVER BEEN, DIRECTORS LEARN

TOURNAMENTS BOOKED FOR EVERY SUNDAY FROM NOW UNTIL LABOR DAY

The Brainerd Country club is in a better condition this year than it has even been. The greens and fairways are in excellent shape and the roughs are being cut down the second time whereas in the past they were only cut once a year.

The financial condition of the club is also at its peak. At a meeting of the board of directors last evening it was reported that there are 54 paid up members. This even though the year is only half over exceeds the highest number that the club has ever had. The secretary has been busy for the past two weeks collecting the dues and his efforts met with such a degree of success that the board of directors decided last night not to post the names of the delinquent members at this time as has been done in the past, owing to the fact that there were only a few who are still in arrears.

Another feature of the club which shows its growth is the number of tournaments that are being held this year. Every Sunday from now until Labor Day is filled. The tourists are nearly twice as many this year as of last year and the local players are turning out in greater numbers all the time so that viewed from any angle the Brainerd Country club is certainly at its height. The friends of the club are interested in knowing that the Brainerd Country club is today extending an invitation to the Minnesota State Golf Association to hold its next state amateur tournament under the auspices of this club and on the finest 18 hole grass greens in the entire state, namely the Harrison & Start course, 12 miles west of Brainerd.

Ruth's four swings resulted in a mere single.

NORTHEAST WINS CITY FIRST HALF CHAMPIONSHIP

DEFEATED SOUTH SIDE BY 6 TO 1 SCORE LAST EVENING IN REPLAY GAME

NORTHEAST PLAYED GREAT BALL; JARBOE STRUCK OUT 9 MEN, GAVE 2 HITS

Northeast won the undisputed championship of the first half of the city baseball league last evening by defeating the South Side by the score of 6 to 1 before a large crowd at the N. P. baseball field.

Jarboe, moundster for N. E., pitched great ball, striking out nine men and allowing only two hits. He walked only one man and throughout the entire game each of his team mates backed him to the best of their ability.

The South Side team entered the fray in a handicapped position in that their catcher, Norman, was on the injured list with a broken thumb. Peterson was forced to fill in the vacancy. Swanson, S. S. heaver, was taken out in the second inning and replaced by Fitzharris who pitched nice ball, allowing only one run.

The high lights of the game follow: Hegstead's stop of Schwindeman's hard hit grounder in the fifth inning; Elling's long three base hit which scored two runs for N. E.; Bedal's two hits, and Peterson's two hits.

Last night's game was a play-off of last Wednesday's game which resulted in a win of 6 to 1 for Northeast but which was protested by the South Side after the sixth inning on the grounds that the N. E. aggregation used a player not eligible.

A baseball meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. at 7 o'clock tonight to draw up a schedule for the second half of the season and handle any other business that may come up.

Enough to make a pipe get puffed up

IF YOUR jimmy-pipe could talk, it would say: "Fill me with Prince Albert and watch me strut. I'll repay you a hundred-fold." No doubt about it, many a pipe has been blamed for things that weren't its fault a-tall. You have no idea how well a pipe behaves on P. A.

On my say-so, buy yourself a tidy red tin of good old P. A. today. Throw back the hinged lid and revel in that fragrance of the world's greatest pipe-tobacco, bar none. Then tuck a neat wad into the business-end of your pipe and light up. There's the answer to every pipe-wish.

Cool as a pound-keeper. Sweet as escape from the place he keeps. Mild, but with that full, satisfying flavor of the greatest tobacco that ever tumbled into a pipe. No matter how wide you open the smoke-throttle, there isn't a stop-sign or a detour anywhere.

Nearby is a store where they hand out jimmy-pipe joy in tidy red tins. My advice to you is to make tracks for there at once. Fill your pipe with this glorious tobacco and get the fun that's due you. No matter what your present program is, try P. A. Give your pipe a chance!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

ABIJAH AND HIS NEW ADAGE

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

BENT and a little gray, a little wizened, a little too patiently smiling, at heart brave, and the kindest of men.

She was years younger, an inch taller; molded in self-elected duty; given to crazes of the uplift; at heart mild, and the kindest of women.

At present the no-breakfast fever had the entire family in its grip. The family always became converted, or tried to be, whenever Mrs. A. J. Mathews adopted a new cult. Mrs. A. J. Mathews was about thirty-five years old, but at that time was addicted to "old-lady shoes," dull gray or brown dresses made on the severest lines, and drew her really pretty hair into an unbecoming knot. She was a creature of strong convictions.

If Mrs. Mathews enjoyed the no-breakfast regime, and if the twins survived it, that is no sign it was satisfactory to him, her worthy husband. There were morning hours when this good man felt he was dying of famine. From five o'clock till twelve is a jump, and if you count back to supper time, as sufferers will, it is chasmal. Abijah—that's what the A stood for—took himself out for a walk one June morning; he was too nervous to work any longer on his sermon. Although for the last two years he had been unattached to any church, he tried to write a good new sermon every week; when he had a chance he delivered these in pulpits to which he was sent as a supply. In fact, supply seemed to be his only calling; it began to look like a life job. This particular morning he wanted to think something new and fresh; he felt he was "going stale," without a single bite of breakfast on which to base celebration. He would call on his old Aunt Solace, he smiled faintly when he heard the peg, peg, of a stout cane coming rapidly. She was tall and bright eyed; she moved swiftly and surely in spite of her lameness.

"Bless you, my boy!" she shrieked, pleasantly, and her face became all one good smile. "How is everything, world, flesh and devil?"

"My part of it is—" He was just going to say, "hungry," but that would have been the same as asking a hand-out, and getting it; "well, Aunt Solace," he continued nonchalantly, "we all seem pretty well. Livonia thinks the new plan beneficial to her, and it hasn't harmed the twins up to date."

"How about Abijah?" Her sudden wide smile was almost wicked.

He twinkled; he knew his own weaknesses, but he would sometimes extenuate; "Aunt Solace, I've sometimes thought I got a bad start in life; my name—but what can't be cured must be endured."

"For fifty-one years you've been getting bad starts, young man! 'Tisn't too late, though, to get a few good starts."

He looked inquiringly up. She was a good four inches taller than he, and beaming down on him like a good-humored and intelligent ibis. She answered his look. "Abijah, what can't be endured must be cured! I told you, many years ago, to drop that name you hate so, and just use John. I told you to tell the people you preach to that they're a pack of sinners all, and the poorest preacher ever stood in their pulpits sacrifices lots more than they did, and likely as not was a heap too good for them, I told you—" She stopped; she hadn't told him this, nor would she; she wouldn't criticize a man's wife, not even the wife of her favorite nephew.

He read between the lines of her wide smile; he felt himself making a sudden resolve; he rose to go. "Thank you, Aunt Solace; now, if—if you happen to hear some new lead rustling a bit noisily, why, maybe I'm turning it over."

Instead of going to work on that sermon, that wonderful best sermon he never yet had written, he trudged on foot to the next town, walked straight to its chief restaurant and ordered the best breakfast to be had at that betwixt-and-between hour. It included steak, a delicacy forbidden with the rise of the no-breakfast scheme. He came home on a train, and for two hours worked on a sermon which he faintly hoped would prove to be that fleeting wonderful best. The dinner-bell rang; he looked up, smiled; he was waiting for a voice. It came. From the foot of the stairs Livonia called in patient, strained notes. "Mr. Mathews, dinner is ready; didn't you hear the bell?"

"Yes, dear, but I didn't care for any."

This amazing answer brought her upstairs. He dipped some ink and bent over his page. He looked up, kindly and patiently; "I have just eaten, dear. I shan't want anything for some time."

Mr. Mathews was not happy, but he was determined; at 3:30 he threw everything aside and pattered off to a train. He soon was in the same eating-house. The small remnant of the afternoon was spent in his study and was mostly devoted to the business of justifying himself to an accusing conscience. Conscience told him he was selfish, cruel; reason answered, "no such thing!" Then he muttered to himself, just as if he had invented the new adage, "What can't be endured must be cured!"

The supper-bell rang and got no answer from the minister's study. Then without preliminary calling Livonia came up with a firm tread. "The supper is ready, Mr. Mathews," she announced.

"Yes, dear; I heard the bell, but I don't care for supper; I've already had two good meals." He dipped more ink, and wrote absently, "John."

"Is this sort of thing to be kept up long?" Livonia asked patiently.

"Just as long as necessary," he answered patiently but dryly.

Toward evening, three days later, he coasted the village with rapid strides toward the distant bungalow; he ran up the steps like a boy and twisted the gong. Aunt Solace was reading; she glanced up with her quick smile. "You look—just right, Abijah; lots better than the other day."

"My name is John," said he. "I can stay only a minute, Aunt Solace; Livonia's promised something especially nice for supper, chicken; I'd hate to disappoint her. But after all, breakfast at seven is the most welcome of the three meals at present."

"Has she—?" Aunt Solace still would not criticize her nephew's wife.

"Livonia's been converted to the early breakfast idea, for hard-working people like me." He called the last phrase from the sidewalk.

At the door he was met by wife, twins and a visiting deacon from Yerkum Town, where he had supplied, hopelessly, four times. "Yes! no mistake about it," smiled the deacon; "here's the letter; we want you worst way; vote absolutely unanimous; here's the letter."

John gave his acceptance with hearty thanks: "I'll write it out later, but come now and let's taste my wife's supper." Then for the first time he noticed Livonia was wearing something extremely pretty; pink, and an amber necklace; he remembered the necklace, but the dress was new.

The strangest thing about it all was that John really had written a wonderful sermon, the great sermon of his dreams, during those few rebellious days; and there was a happy feeling in his mind that he could write seven hundred and fifty more almost as good.

Hermit Gives Simple Recipe for Longevity

An amazing secret of longevity is claimed to have been discovered by a Korean, regarded as a saint, named Skajkman, amazing in its simplicity as well as in its anticipated results. For it consists in nothing but a diet of water and small cakes made of pine bark. Upon such food Skajkman is said to have subsisted for many years. He is now sixty years old and "still going strong," and expresses the utmost confidence in living for two hundred ninety years longer, thus rounding out three centuries and a half.

Such an age is, of course, much less than that credited to the antediluvian patriarchs. But it is precisely twice that attained by Abraham, and, of course, vastly greater than that attained by any one since his time.

Skajkman is a hermit, who lives on Corea's holy mountain, Kongosan, and told of his method of longevity to the members of the Japanese Peer club of Tokyo. He says he found the secret inscribed in ancient books, which record that in this manner men have prolonged their lives to five hundred years. He sleeps only two hours a day, massages himself and performs other hygienic exercises according to the holy teachings of the Buddhists, and his food consists of a few of the pine bark cakes and one or two glasses of water daily.

As a result of this regimen he said he feels younger and stronger at sixty than he did thirty years ago at only half that age. He is diligently searching the holy books from which he learned his secret in expectation of finding some method of living without any food at all.

Grossome German Play

King Lear's descendants are the subjects of a new play in verse that is being produced in a lavish style in Berlin. The production is being well received. "Gongfa, Granddaughter of King Lear," is the title, and Carl Leyst, a well-known German historian, philosopher, inventor and dramatist, is the author. The plot is that King Lear has left the throne to the daughter of his favorite, Cordelia, on condition that the young girl never look with favor upon a man whose birth renders him unfit to be her legal consort. Gongfa, young and beautiful, is fascinated by one completely unworthy of her, and becomes the mother of a child. To keep the secret from the people the child must die. Gongfa kills it herself in desperation, and then dies, too, pathetic and mad as Ophelia.

Famous in History

The lofty citadel which formed the nucleus of an ancient Greek city and the city's chief defense was called the acropolis. However, the word acropolis is now specially applied to the rocky eminence at Athens, the capital of Greece.

On this acropolis stand the remains of the Parthenon, and it was here, Mars hill, that St. Paul addressed the wise men of Athens.

Some Tree Lore

The superstitious believe that a calamity will befall the nation in a year when the ash produces no locks and keys. Of the rowan tree we are told that, according to the legend, it was from the rowan tree that the cross of Calvary was made. As for the poplar, there is a folk belief that when it turns up the whites of its leaves there is going to be a storm.

IT WAS GRAND TO BE HOMESICK

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

MARIA CRAIG hung listlessly over the old cook stove ready to take up the dinner as soon as she heard her husband's step on the side porch. From time to time she glanced from the window with a far-away look in her eyes. Maria knew every inch of the view from that window as well as she knew her own kitchen with its smoked and cracked walls, uneven floor, battered cook stove and old-fashioned iron sink. Oh, how miserably sick she was of it all. If she could only go a great way off and stay and stay until she became homesick—perhaps.

Homesick! She did not know from any experience of her own what the word meant. She had never been away from Palenville to stay longer than a day in her whole life. She was even likely to die where she was born in this same dingy house where she had the assurance of living many years yet—she came from a long-lived race, and she was only fifty-one. Take this house for instance. It had been in the Palen family for four generations and had come to her by the death of her parents. When she married John Craig he had come to live with her. John was an honest, hard-working man, but inclined to be stingy.

Just at the moment the potatoes were done John came.

"I stopped at the post office," he said. "Here's a letter for you."

Maria read the letter aloud:

"Dear Maria: You have always promised to make me a visit. Why can't you come now? Since Jerry died I am all alone. How much alone, I am just beginning to find out. I have money, acquaintances, friends, but in my loneliness I long for some one I knew in the old days, some one who knew Jerry and me when we lived in Palenville. I am sending you a railroad ticket. Please use it and come. Lovingly,

"LOUISE."

"Well, forevermore!" Maria ejaculated. "Louise Cady wants me to make her a visit. Why, I haven't seen her since her folks died and that's all of twenty years ago. It's nice of her to remember me but of course I can't go."

"Why not?" John spoke slowly. "She sent you a ticket. I'd go." And so John settled the matter just as he always did.

Louise met Maria at the station. She had a taxi waiting and they were whirled through the city to a great apartment building. Louise unlocked a door and they entered a twilight dimness which was instantly transformed when she pressed a button on the wall.

"This is your room, Maria," Louise said, crossing the small living room and opening a door. "Make yourself at home and we'll see what Freda has got for us to eat."

Maria, who was of a large and solid build, hardly dared turn around in the tiny bedroom. A narrow bed took up most of the room, a wardrobe took nearly one side, and a dressing table the other. To Maria, unused to anything but a stove, the central heating in the apartment seemed almost suffocating. She went to the window and raised it. But this did not afford much relief because the window opened onto an air shaft. "Well, forevermore!" she gasped in astonishment.

When she had finished dressing she went to find Louise. She had not far to go for Louise was in a tiny "cooped-up" place no bigger than my pantry," Maria thought. Louise was working over a queer-looking machine all knobs and levers.

"Where's your kitchen, Louise?" Maria asked.

"Why, this is the kitchen," Louise answered.

"But where's your cook stove?"

"This is my stove," Louise answered. "It's electric and really wonderful. No ashes, no matches. Just turn a knob." She opened a door and revealed a roast of meat, baked potatoes and a delicious-looking pudding ready to serve.

Maria stared. "Why, it's uncanny!" she murmured. She watched in amazement as Louise went to the wall, opened a door and took out a bottle of cream and several packages placed on the dumb-waiter by the grocery delivery boy. "It's all very handy, I've no doubt," she commented thoughtfully.

"I should think so! When I think of the old days back in Palenville with its outdoor wells, wood fires, heatless houses and cash-and-carry stores I wonder how I ever stood it. But I was young—and I had Jerry," and she sighed.

Maria offered to help with the supper work, but Louise informed her that Freda would see to it. She had tickets to a show. She telephoned for a taxi and away they went. It was eleven o'clock when they got home, for Louise insisted upon dropping into a gay little restaurant for a bit of chicken salad after the show.

Maria, used to early hours and quiet evenings, never closed an eye until three o'clock, and even then she did not rest because her dreams were full of half-naked girls dancing as if for dear life on cakes of ice, while millions of bright lights danced around them. She was awake at six, but as she had orders not to get up until eight she had nothing else to do but lie and listen to the street noises.

They had a light breakfast at noon, and Maria, used to an early and hearty breakfast, was almost faint from lack of food. She thought longingly of eggs, pancakes smothered in maple sirup and at least two big cups of her special brand of coffee.

All that day they were on the go. Louise acted as if she wanted to show Maria the whole city at once. In the evening there was another show.

Next day the program was the same. The fourth morning Maria looked pale and felt shaky. Even the morning coffee did not revive her. She looked at Louise to see if she, too, were not beginning to give out under the strain but she looked as fresh as ever.

"I've made up a full program for today," Louise said, nibbling at a roll like a mouse. "How I am enjoying your visit, Maria! I haven't felt so much like myself since Jerry went away." She sighed. "I have a perfectly wonderful morning planned—"

Maria gulped. "I am sorry, Louise, but I feel that I must go home—today."

"Go—home! Why, Maria! Are you sick—er—"

"No, I'm not sick—but I've got to go. I've had a lovely time, Louise, but I really can't stay another minute."

It was dusk when Maria reached home. She went round to the kitchen door where a light shone out. She was greeted by a smell of frying pork. John was getting supper. He had fried pork, mashed potatoes and some of her very own kind of coffee! She ran across the room and flung her arms about his neck.

"John!" she breathed as she cuddled her head against his shoulder. "Thank God, I'm home!"

"Why, Maria!" John gasped in astonishment. "I wasn't expecting you for days. Are you sick?"

"No—not really sick, John, only a little homesick. And, oh, it's grand to be homesick!"

Not until the next morning when Maria entered her kitchen to get breakfast did she notice what had taken place during her absence. There was a bright new range, a new sink and even a new porcelain-covered kitchen table.

"I am going to have a new floor laid, the walls papered and running water put in," John said, just then entering the room. "I wanted to have it all done and the mess cleaned up before you got home. You see, Maria, I sorta figured that after you had seen Louise's grand place you might come back discontented."

But Maria said nothing. She was too busy getting breakfast, such a breakfast as only she knew how to get.

Tracing Bank Notes to Ancient Babylon

One of the earliest banking firms of which there is record was that of Egibi & Son, who are supposed to have carried on an advance, exchange and general financial business in Babylon between 700 and 600 B. C. Knowledge of this firm is obtained from certain records on clay tablets found in excavations made upon and near the site of that city.

There have also been found in these and other Assyrian explorations bills of credit and drafts, in the form of small clay tablets, which were, apparently, in use among the merchants of that time. It is plain that these tablets were negotiable, but from the nature of things they could not pass by indorsement, since once the clay was baked nothing more could be added. The name of the payee was for this reason frequently omitted.

In Egypt similar inscriptions on papyrus of very early date have been found. The use of notes as a paper currency was adopted by the Chinese long before it was tried in Europe, and a bank for the issue of such notes was established in that country about 1000 A. D.

Banking in ancient Greece was so far developed before the decadence of that country that it included deposits at interest and letters of credit as well as advances. The Romans derived their banking customs from the Greeks and added somewhat to them.

Red Diamonds

Considerable attention has been attracted lately by the finding near Kimberley of a red diamond that is expected, when cut, to weigh six karats. Two other red diamonds have also been found near Pretoria: one, a brownish red, weighed 1½ karats in the rough and ¾ karat cut; the other is a reddish amber and weighed 1 carat rough and ½ karat cut. Red diamonds are exceedingly rare; there is a fine red stone of ¾ karat in the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago, one of 2 karats in the museum at Vienna and the red diamond of the Emperor Paul, weighing 8 carats, among the Russian crown jewels.

His Meaning

A motor tourist, passing the Johnson home on Rumpus Ridge, beheld a boy driving a mule team and heard him yell, "Hud-up, there, Jule!" Then the onlooker observed the boy suddenly straighten up and leap forward, landing on the mule's back, and begin beating her with both fists as he rolled off onto the ground.

"What in the world," asked the stranger, "did the lad mean by such procedure?"

"Aw, that's my boy, Banty," replied Gap Johnson. "I reckon likely he wanted the darn mule to know he meant business."—Kansas City Star.

RED INDIANS STILL HOLD TO PAGANISM

Firm in Faith of Primitive Codes of Ancestors.

Nearly 100,000 Indians in the United States are untouched by Christian doctrines, the board of Indian commissioners recently estimated, and remain to all intents and purposes pagans, presumably still holding in large measure the beliefs of their ancestors. What these primitive Indian religious beliefs are is described by the National Geographic society.

"Poetic fancy and a natural tendency to describe newly encountered beliefs and customs in terms of those already familiar have given white people many false ideas in regard to the religious beliefs of the American Indians," says a society bulletin. "Some enthusiasts have pictured the typical red man as noble and ethical beyond his white brother, believing in a fatherly 'Great Spirit' and striving to live the good life that he may go after death to the 'Happy Hunting Ground.' This is a fallacy."

"There is no single religion of the American Indians. Instead the beliefs differed widely in different sections and among different tribes. There was, however, a general similarity of views, and these were about what could have been expected from people of a relatively primitive degree of culture. Nowhere does what could truly be called the conception of a 'Great Spirit,' an overruling deity, emerge."

"There were greater and lesser spirits, to be sure, but the characteristic Indian belief is in a multitude of spirits animating animals, objects and the various forces of nature. Nor were these spirits inherently good or bad morally. They might help or hinder the individual in his activities or health, and whether they did the one or the other was the test of their 'goodness' or 'badness' for him."

"The primitive Indian has no conception of a hell; nor is his entry into the spirit land dependent on his conduct. He enters it as a matter of course, he believes, and continues there whatever activities have interested him in this life. To some tribes this is a 'skyland,' to others it is merely a region of the earth, 'in the West,' 'across the sea,' or 'beyond a river.' Others believe the villages of the dead to be near their villages, but invisible."

"Coupled in the mind of the primitive Indian with a belief in many spirits is a belief in magic, through which the spirits can be influenced. The medicine men possessed the crets of such magic. It was believed, and often interceded. All Indians believe in the possession of a soul which leaves the body at death. They also believe that it leaves at other times, and some tribes ascribe illness to this absence of the soul. The services of the medicine man are sought to recover the missing soul. Belief in a continuing soul did not lead to ancestor worship, as among Eastern peoples.

"Most Indian mythologists do not concern themselves with creation. They assume the existence of the earth and deal with its peopling and with the origin of arts, customs and rites. All these are supposed to have come by a sort of revelation. Some tribes, however, especially those of the Pacific coast region, do have a creation myth. In some it is 'Old Man Above.' In others an animal, such as the coyote or the silver fox, who makes a hole in the sky, comes to earth and creates the animals and men. In some of these myths there is only water beneath the sky, but the descending being creates the earth in the form of an island, which grows."

"Morality and ethics were well developed among American Indians. They have a strong sense of conscience and many individuals are strikingly benevolent. The tribal morality was strict. He who lied, failed to keep his promises or stole within the tribe was disgraced. Murder, too, was punished. War removed ethical barriers among Indians, as it has among most people in all ages. It then became a virtue for the Indian to kill his enemies and to take their property."

"On the whole, the Indian's religious beliefs may be described as being wholly practical and as springing from fear of the more or less hostile forces of nature that surrounded him. His various rites arose from his efforts to propitiate or to take advantage of these forces."

What Moles Eat

Common garden moles live chiefly on earth-worms, grubs and various insects. Sometimes they eat a limited amount of vegetable matter, but most of the damage to garden truck blamed on moles is the work of various species of mice which follow the mole runways.

Silk Hosiery Popular

Short skirts are blamed for women stepping out of cotton stockings into the silk-socking class, says the Pathfinder Magazine. Of the 60,000,000 pairs of women's hose made in this country in 1925 less than 29,000,000 were of cotton. This is a drop of about 5,000,000 pairs of cotton stockings and a bigger gain for silk or near-silk hose. The exhibition of feminine knees has also resulted in an increasing demand for silk-all-the-way-up leg coverings.

Blow Bubbles for Beauty

German girls are blowing bubbles to become beautiful. It has long been known that persons who play wind instruments are healthy and it is asserted that bubble-blowing can produce a similar effect. The girls who participate in the bubble-blowing parties say there is nothing like it for rounding out thin cheeks and scraggy necks.

When we are history

When the world has spun on until 1927 seems quaint and bygone, historians will be writing our social history . . . how we lived and worked and played.

They will get their material from the old files of our daily newspapers. And how carefully they will study the advertisements, because it is advertising that truly reflects the customs of our times.

But, while our advertising will be interesting to the historians of tomorrow, it is more than interesting to us of today . . . it is vital. For advertising brings news of all that is best in our daily life. The pleasant things. The useful things. Things that lighten our burdens. Help us in our daily work. Bring ease, comfort and color into our lives.

In short, advertising shows us the way to get more out of living.

ABIJAH AND HIS NEW ADAGE

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

BENT and a little gray, a little wizened, a little too patiently smiling, at heart brave, and the kindest of men.

She was years younger, an inch taller; molded in self-elected duty; given to crazes of the uplift; at heart mild, and the kindest of women.

At present the no-breakfast fever had the entire family in its grip. The family always became converted, or tried to be, whenever Mrs. A. J. Mathews adopted a new cult. Mrs. A. J. Mathews was about thirty-five years old, but at that time was addicted to "old-lady shoes," dull gray or brown dresses made on the severest lines, and drew her really pretty hair into an unbecoming knot. She was a creature of strong convictions.

If Mrs. Mathews enjoyed the no-breakfast regime, and if the twins survived it, that is no sign it was satisfactory to him, her worthy husband. There were morning hours when this good man felt he was dying of famine. From five o'clock till twelve is a jump, and if you count back to supper time, as sufferers will, it is chasmal. Abijah—that's what the A stood for—took himself out for a walk one June morning; he was too nervous to work any longer on his sermon. Although for the last two years he had been unattached to any church, he tried to write a good new sermon every week; when he had a chance he delivered these in pulpits to which he was sent as a supply. In fact, supply seemed to be his only calling; it began to look like a life job. This particular morning he wanted to think something new and fresh; he felt he was "going stale," without a single bite of breakfast on which to base celebration. He would call on his old Aunt Solace, he smiled faintly when he heard the peg, peg, of a stout cane coming rapidly. She was tall and bright eyed; she moved swiftly and surely in spite of her lameness.

"Bless you, my boy," she shrilled, pleasantly, and her face became all one good smile. "How is everything, world, flesh and devil?"

"My part of it is—," He was just going to say, "hungry," but that would have been the same as asking a hand-out, and getting it; "well, Aunt Solace," he continued nonchalantly, "we all seem pretty well. Livonia thinks the new plan beneficial to her, and it hasn't harmed the twins up to date."

"How about Abijah?" Her sudden wide smile was almost wicked.

He twinkled; he knew his own weaknesses, but he would sometimes extenuate; "Aunt Solace, I've sometimes thought I got a bad start in life; my name—but what can't be cured must be endured."

"For fifty-one years you've been getting bad starts, young man! 'Tisn't too late, though, to get a few good starts."

He looked inquiringly up. She was a good four inches taller than he, and beaming down on him like a good-humored and intelligent bish. She answered his look. "Abijah, what can't be endured must be cured! I told you, many years ago, to drop that name you hate so, and just use John. I told you to tell the people you preach to that they're a pack of sinners all, and the poorest preacher ever stood in their pulpit sacrifices lots more than they did, and likely as not was a heap too good for them, I told you—," She stopped; she hadn't told him this, nor would she; she wouldn't criticize a man's wife, not even the wife of her favorite nephew.

He read between the lines of her wide smile; he felt himself making a sudden resolve; he rose to go. "Thank you, Aunt Solace; now, if—if you happen to hear some leaf rustling a bit noisily, why, maybe I'm turning it over."

Instead of going to work on that sermon, that wonderful best sermon he never yet had written, he trudged on foot to the next town, walked straight to its chief restaurant and ordered the best breakfast to be had at that betwixt-and-between hour. It included steak, a delicacy forbidden with the rise of the no-breakfast scheme. He came home on a train, and for two hours worked on a sermon which he faintly hoped would prove to be that fleeting wonderful best. The dinner-bell rang; he looked up, smiled; he was waiting for a voice. It came. From the foot of the stairs Livonia called in patient, strained notes. "Mr. Mathews, dinner is ready; didn't you hear the bell?"

"Yes, dear, but I didn't care for any."

This amazing answer brought her upstairs. He dipped some ink and bent over his page. He looked up, kindly and patiently; "I have just eaten, dear; I shan't want anything for some time."

Mr. Mathews was not happy, but he was determined; at 3:30 he threw everything aside and pattered off to a train. He soon was in the same eating-house. The small remnant of the afternoon was spent in his study and was mostly devoted to the business of justifying himself to an accusing conscience. Conscience told him he was selfish, cruel; reason answered, "no such thing!" Then he muttered to himself, just as if he had invented the new adage, "What can't be endured must be cured!"

The supper-bell rang and got no answer from the minister's study. Then without preliminary calling Livonia came up with a firm tread. "The supper is ready, Mr. Mathews," she announced.

"Yes, dear; I heard the bell, but I don't care for supper; I've already had two good meals." He dipped more ink, and wrote absently, "John."

"Is this sort of thing to be kept up long?" Livonia asked patiently.

"Just as long as necessary," he answered patiently but dryly.

Toward evening, three days later, he coasted the village with rapid strides toward the distant bungalow; he ran up the steps like a boy and twisted the gong. Aunt Solace was reading; She glanced up with her quick smile: "You look—just right, Abijah; lots better than the other day."

"My name is John," said he. "I can stay only a minute, Aunt Solace; Livonia's promised something especially nice for supper, chicken; I'd hate to disappoint her. But after all, breakfast at seven is the most welcome of the three meals at present."

"Has she—," Aunt Solace still would not criticize her nephew's wife.

"Livonia's been converted to the early breakfast idea, for hard-working people like me." He called the last phrase from the sidewalk.

At the door he was met by wife, twins and a visiting deacon from Yokum Town, where he had supplied, hopelessly, four times. "Yes! no mistake about it," smiled the deacon; "here's the letter; we want you worst way; vote absolutely unanimous; here's the letter."

John gave his acceptance with hearty thanks: "I'll write it out later, but come now and let's taste my wife's supper." Then for the first time he noticed Livonia was wearing something extremely pretty; pink, and an amber necklace; he remembered the necklace, but the dress was new.

The strangest thing about it all was that John really had written a wonderful sermon, the great sermon of his dreams, during those few rebellious days; and there was a happy feeling in his mind that he could write seven hundred and fifty more almost as good.

Hermit Gives Simple Recipe for Longevity

An amazing secret of longevity is claimed to have been discovered by a Korean, regarded as a saint, named Skajkinan, amazing in its simplicity as well as in its anticipated results. For it consists in nothing but a diet of water and small cakes made of pine bark. Upon such food Skajkinan is said to have subsisted for many years. He is now sixty years old and "still going strong," and expresses the utmost confidence in living for two hundred ninety years longer, thus rounding out three centuries and a half.

Such an age is, of course, much less than that credited to the antediluvian patriarchs. But it is precisely twice that attained by Abraham, and, of course, vastly greater than that attained by any one since his time.

Skajkinan is a hermit, who lives on Korea's holy mountain, Kongosan, and told of his method of longevity to the members of the Japanese Peer club of Tokyo. He says he found the secret inscribed in ancient books, which record that in this manner men have prolonged their lives to five hundred years. He sleeps only two hours a day, massages himself and performs other hygienic exercises according to the holy teachings of the Buddhists, and his food consists of a few of the pine bark cakes and one or two glasses of water daily.

As a result of this regimen he said he feels younger and stronger at sixty than he did thirty years ago at only half that age. He is diligently searching the holy books from which he learned his secret in expectation of finding some method of living without any food at all.

Growsome German Play

King Lear's descendants are the subjects of a new play in verse that is being produced in a lavish style in Berlin. The production is being well received. "Gonya, Granddaughter of King Lear," is the title, and Carl Leyst, a well-known German historian, philosopher, inventor and dramatist, is the author. The plot is that King Lear has left the throne to the daughter of his favorite, Cordelia, on condition that the young girl never look with favor upon a man whose birth renders him unfit to be her legal consort. Gonya, young and beautiful, is fascinated by one completely unworthy of her, and becomes the mother of a child. To keep the secret from the people the child must die. Gonya kills it herself in desperation, and then dies, too, pathetic and mad as Ophelia.

Famous in History

The lofty citadel which formed the nucleus of an ancient Greek city and the city's chief defense was called the acropolis. However, the word acropolis is now specially applied to the rocky eminence at Athens, the capital of Greece.

On this acropolis stand the remains of the Parthenon, and it was here, Mars hill, that St. Paul addressed the wise men of Athens.

Some Tree Lore

The superstitions believe that a calamity will befall the nation in a year when the ash produces no locks and keys. Of the rowan tree we are told that, according to the legend, it was from the rowan tree that the cross of Calvary was made. As for the poplar, there is a folk belief that when it turns up the whites of its leaves there is going to be a storm.

IT WAS GRAND TO BE HOMESICK

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

MARIA CRAIG hung listlessly over the old cook stove ready to take up the dinner as soon as she heard her husband's step on the side porch. From time to time she glanced from the window with a far-away look in her eyes. Maria knew every inch of the view from that window as well as she knew her own kitchen with its smoked and cracked walls, uneven floor, battered cook stove and old-fashioned iron sink. Oh, how miserably sick she was of it all. If she could only go a great way off and stay and stay until she became homesick—perhaps.

Homesick! She did not know from any experience of her own what the word meant. She had never been away from Palenville to stay longer than a day in her whole life. She was even likely to die where she was born in this same dingy house where she was at this moment. Of course she had the assurance of living many years yet—she came from a long-lived race, and she was only fifty-one. Take this house for instance. It had been in the Palen family for four generations and had come to her by the death of her parents. When she married John Craig he had come to live with her. John was an honest, hard-working man, but inclined to be stingy. Just at the moment the potatoes were done John came.

"I stopped at the post office," he said. "Here's a letter for you."

Maria read the letter aloud:

"Dear Maria: You have always promised to make me a visit. Why can't you come now? Since Jerry died I am all alone. How much alone. I am just beginning to find out. I have money, acquaintances, friends, but in my loneliness I long for some one I knew in the old days, some one who knew Jerry and me when we lived in Palenville. I am sending you a railroad ticket. Please use it and come. Lovingly,

"LOUISE."

"Well, forevermore!" Maria ejaculated. "Louise Cady wants me to make her a visit. Why, I haven't seen her since her folks died and that's all of twenty years ago. It's nice of her to remember me but of course I can't go—"

"Why not?" John spoke slowly. "She sent you a ticket. I'd go." And so John settled the matter just as he always did.

Louise met Maria at the station. She had a taxi waiting and they were whirled through the city to a great apartment building. Louise unlocked a door and they entered a twilight dimness which was instantly transformed when she pressed a button on the wall.

"This is your room, Maria," Louise said, crossing the small living room and opening a door. "Make yourself at home and we'll see what Freda has got for us to eat."

Maria, who was of a large and solid build, hardly dared turn around in the tiny bedroom. A narrow bed took up most of the room, a wardrobe took nearly one side, and a dressing table the other. To Maria, unused to anything but a stove, the central heating in the apartment seemed almost suffocating. She went to the window and raised it. But this did not afford much relief because the window opened onto an air shaft. "Well, forevermore!" she gasped in astonishment.

When she had finished dressing she went to find Louise. She had not far to go for Louise was in a tiny "cooped-up place no bigger than my pantry," Maria thought. Louise was working over a queer-looking machine all knobs and levers.

"Where's your kitchen, Louise?" Maria asked.

"Why, this is the kitchen," Louise answered.

"But where's your cook stove?"

"This is my stove," Louise answered. "It's electric and really wonderful. No ashes, no matches. Just turn a knob." She opened a door and revealed a roast of meat, baked potatoes and a delicious-looking pudding ready to serve.

Maria stared. "Why, it's uncanny!" she murmured. She watched in amazement as Louise went to the wall, opened a door and took out a bottle of cream and several packages placed on the dumb-waiter by the grocery delivery boy. "It's all very handy, I've no doubt," she commented thoughtfully.

"I should think so! When I think of the old days back in Palenville with its outdoor wells, wood fires, heatless houses and cash-and-carry stores I wonder how I ever stood it. But I was young—and I had Jerry," and she sighed.

Maria offered to help with the supper work, but Louise informed her that Freda would see to it. She had tickets to a show. She telephoned for a taxi and away they went. It was eleven o'clock when they got home, for Louise insisted upon dropping into a gay little restaurant for a bit of chicken salad after the show.

Maria, used to early hours and quiet evenings, never closed an eye until three o'clock, and even then she did not rest because her dreams were full of half-naked girls dancing as if for dear life on cakes of ice, while millions of bright lights danced around them. She was awake at six, but as she had orders not to get up until eight she had nothing else to do but lie and listen to the street noises.

They had a light breakfast at noon, and Maria, used to an early and hearty breakfast, was almost faint from lack of food. She thought longingly of eggs, pancakes smothered in maple sirup and at least two big cups of her special brand of coffee.

All that day they were on the go. Louise acted as if she wanted to show Maria the whole city at once. In the evening there was another show.

Next day the program was the same. The fourth morning Maria looked pale and felt shaky. Even the morning coffee did not revive her. She looked at Louise to see if she, too, were not beginning to give out under the strain but she looked as fresh as ever.

"I've made up a full program for today," Louise said, nibbling at a roll like a mouse. "How I am enjoying your visit, Maria! I haven't felt so much like myself since Jerry went away." She sighed. "I have a perfectly wonderful morning planned—"

Maria gulped, "I am sorry, Louise, but I feel that I must go home—to-day—"

"Go—home! Why, Maria! Are you sick—er—"

"No, I'm not sick—but I've got to go. I've had a lovely time, Louise, but I really can't stay another minute."

It was dusk when Maria reached home. She went round to the kitchen door where a light shone out. She was greeted by a smell of frying pork. John was getting supper. He had fried pork, mashed potatoes and some of her very own kind of coffee! She ran across the room and flung her arms about his neck.

"John!" she breathed as she cuddled her head against his shoulder. "Thank God, I'm home!"

"Why, Maria!" John gasped in astonishment. "I wasn't expecting you for days. Are you sick?"

"No—not really sick, John, only a little homesick. And, oh, it's grand to be homesick!"

Not until the next morning when Maria entered her kitchen to get breakfast did she notice what had taken place during her absence. There was a bright new range, a new sink and even a new porcelain-covered kitchen table.

"I am going to have a new floor laid, the walls papered and running water put in," John said, just then entering the room. "I wanted to have it all done and the mess cleaned up before you got home. You see, Maria, I sorta figured that after you had seen Louise's grand place you might come back discontented—"

But Maria said nothing. She was too busy getting breakfast, such a breakfast as only she knew how to get.

Tracing Bank Notes to Ancient Babylon

One of the earliest banking firms of which there is record was that of Egibi & Son, who are supposed to have carried on an advance, exchange and general financial business in Babylon between 700 and 600 B. C. Knowledge of this firm is obtained from certain records on clay tablets found in excavations made upon and near the site of that city.

There have also been found in these and other Assyrian explorations bills of credit and drafts. In the form of small clay tablets, which were, apparently, in use among the merchants of that time. It is plain that these tablets were negotiable, but from the nature of things they could not pass by indorsement, since once the clay was baked nothing more could be added. The name of the payee was for this reason frequently omitted.

In Egypt similar inscriptions on papyrus of very early date have been found. The use of notes as a paper currency was adopted by the Chinese long before it was tried in Europe, and a bank for the issue of such notes was established in that country about 1000 A. D.

Banking in ancient Greece was so far developed before the decadence of that country that it included deposits at interest and letters of credit as well as advances. The Romans derived their banking customs from the Greeks and added somewhat to them.

Red Diamonds

Considerable attention has been attracted lately by the finding near Kimberley of a red diamond that is expected, when cut, to weigh six karats. Two other red diamonds have also been found near Pretoria: one, a brownish red, weighed 1½ karats in the rough and ¾ karat cut; the other is a reddish amber and weighed 1 carat rough and ½ karat cut. Red diamonds are exceedingly rare; there is a fine red stone of ¾ karat in the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago, one of 2 karats in the museum at Vienna and the red diamond of the Emperor Paul, weighing 8 karats, among the Russian crown jewels.

His Meaning

A motor tourist, passing the Johnson home on Rumpus Ridge, beheld a boy driving a mule team and heard him yell, "Hud-up, there, Jule!" Then the onlooker observed the boy suddenly straighten up and leap forward, landing on the mule's back, and begin beating her with both fists as he rolled off onto the ground.

"What in the world," asked the stranger, "did the lad mean by such procedure?"

"Aw, that's my boy, Banty," replied Gap Johnson. "I reckon likely he wanted the durn' mule to know he meant business."—Kansas City Star.

RED INDIANS STILL HOLD TO PAGANISM

Firm in Faith of Primitive Codes of Ancestors.

Nearly 100,000 Indians in the United States are untouched by Christian doctrines, the board of Indian commissioners recently estimated, and remain to all intents and purposes pagans, presumably still holding in large measure the beliefs of their ancestors. What these primitive Indian religious beliefs are is described by the National Geographic society.

"Poetic fancy and a natural tendency to describe newly encountered beliefs and customs in terms of those already familiar have given white people many false ideas in regard to the religious beliefs of the American Indians," says a society bulletin. "Some enthusiasts have pictured the typical red man as noble and ethical beyond his white brother, believing in a fatherly 'Great Spirit' and striving to live the good life that he may go after death to the Happy Hunting Ground. This is a fallacy.

"There is no single religion of the American Indians. Instead the beliefs differed widely in different sections and among different tribes. There was, however, a general similarity of views, and these were about what could have been expected from people of a relatively primitive degree of culture. Nowhere does what could truly be called the conception of a 'Great Spirit,' an overruling deity, emerge.

"There were greater and lesser spirits, to be sure, but the characteristic Indian belief is in a multitude of spirits animating animals, objects and the various forces of nature. Nor were these spirits inherently good or bad morally. They might help or hinder the individual in his activities or health, and whether they did the one or the other was the test of their 'goodness' or 'badness' for him.

"The primitive Indian has no conception of a hell; nor is his entry into the spirit land dependent on his conduct. He enters it as a matter of course, he believes, and continues there whatever activities have interested him in this life. To some tribes this is a 'skyland,' to others it is merely a region of the earth, 'in the West,' 'across the sea,' or 'beyond a river.' Others believe the villages of the dead to be near their villages, but invisible.

"Coupled in the mind of the primitive Indian with a belief in many spirits, is a belief in magic, through which the spirits can be influenced. The medicine men possessed the crets of such magic, it was believed, and often interceded. All Indians believe in the possession of a soul which leaves the body at death. They also believe that it leaves at other times, and some tribes ascribe illness to this absence of the soul. The services of the medicine man are sought to recover the missing soul. Belief in a continuing soul did not lead to ancestor worship, as among Eastern peoples.

"Most Indian mythologists do not concern themselves with creation. They assume the existence of the earth and deal with its peopling and with the origin of arts, customs and rites. All these are supposed to have come by a sort of revelation. Some tribes, however, especially those of the Pacific coast region, do have a creation myth. In some it is 'Old Man Above,' in others an animal, such as the coyote or the silver fox, who makes a hole in the sky, comes to earth and creates the animals and men. In some of these myths there is only water beneath the sky, but the descending being creates the earth in the form of an island, which grows.

"Morality and ethics were well developed among American Indians. They have a strong sense of conscience and many individuals are strikingly benevolent. The tribal morality was strict. He who lied, failed to keep his promises or stole within the tribe was disgraced. Murder, too, was punished. War removed ethical barriers among Indians, as it has among most people in all ages. It then became a virtue for the Indian to kill his enemies and to take their property.

"On the whole, the Indian's religious beliefs may be described as being wholly practical and as springing from fear of the more or less hostile forces of nature that surrounded him. His various rites arose from his efforts to propitiate or to take advantage of these forces."

MADE FIRE CHIEF, FIRE INSPECTOR

Deciding Vote by Mayor Little Places
H. McGinn in
New Post

MAYOR PRESENTS VIEWS

City Engineer Instructed to Make
Necessary Repairs to
City Streets

Fire chief and fire inspector was the new job given H. McGinn, head of the Brainerd Fire Department last evening by the city council as a result of the decision of Mayor Frank E. Little to whom was given the final vote in the matter after the council at the previous meeting had deadlocked on the issue.

Chief McGinn started his duties this morning at a salary of $95 a month.

Mayor Little submitted the following communication in which he gave his decision:

"The matter of the appointment of H. McGinn, now serving as fire chief of the City of Brainerd, as fire chief and fire inspector at a salary of $95.00 a month having been referred to me with a request that I cast a vote in accord with Section 17 of the city charter of the City of Brainerd, I submit the following:

"A view of the record in the office of the city clerk shows that a petition signed by one hundred eighty citizens of the city of Brainerd was duly presented to the council, asking that the office of fire inspector be continued and that such office be combined with that of fire chief. The matter was referred to the finance committee and fire, light and water committee, which committee did on June 6, 1927, make its report to the council, recommending that Mr. McGinn be employed as fire chief and fire inspector at a salary not to exceed $100.00 per month. Alderman V. F. Anderson made the report as chairman of the committee and when Aldermen M. Anderson and Hall moved that the report be rejected, Aldermen V. F. Anderson and Lyons voted in opposition to such motion. The matter was again taken up by the council at its meeting on June 20, at which meeting Aldermen V. F. Anderson and Lyons voted with the other aldermen who have favored the creation of this office of fire chief and fire inspector. A committee from the fire department also appeared before the city council, recommending the employment of Mr. McGinn as fire chief and fire inspector, making such recommendation on the ground that such appointment would increase the efficiency of the fire department, reduce fire hazards and tend to comply with requirements for the reduction of insurance rates.

"So far as I have been able to find in the records, there has been no opposition to the exception of the four votes from the council, while there has been a petition from citizens, a recommendation of a special committee appointed to investigate the matter, a committee of firemen, and apparently a majority of the council, in favor of such appointment. I have referred particularly to the vote of V. F. Anderson and Mr. Lyons for the reason that these two aldermen were absent from the meeting of the council on July 5, and I have cited their action in order to show my grounds for the belief that the appointment would have carried had all members been present at the meeting on July 5.

"For the above reasons I cast my vote in favor of the appointment of H. McGinn as fire chief and fire inspector at a salary of $95.00 a month."

The city engineer was instructed to make the necessary repairs to city streets required at this time.

A report of the audit of the Strand, Roe and Johnson Co., of the city books was received which showed that all the city books were in first class condition.

Alderman Martin Anderson reported on the leakage in electric light lines and on motion the matter was referred to the fire, light and water committee to take up with the water and light board.

The contract of meals for prisoners in the city jail was awarded to the New Brainerd Cafe at 30 cents a meal.

BIDS WANTED

Contracts will be placed for brushing and trenching approximately 4 miles of right of way around our Brainerd-Oak Lawn muskrat ranch on highway No. 2, 10 miles East of Brainerd. We will furnish regular trenching spades for trench 6 inches wide and 12 to 15 inches deep. Brushing must be at least 15 feet wide. We reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

OX-EYE DAISY EVIL

Placed Sentiment Cause of Spread of Nefarious Plant Says Hammerbeck

Samuel Hammerbeck, field representative of the State Department of Agriculture who has been surveying the weed situation in this county states that he has found an abundance of ox-eye daisy in Brainerd and other parts of the county. The tolerance of this pernicious perennial in front yards, on cemeteries, etc., is mostly due to the misplaced sentiment for the nefarious plant.

Mr. Hammerbeck's remarks on the necessity of destroying this weed follow:

"People are spreading this weed by thoughtlessly bringing plants from infected places or receiving them from neighbors. When replanted the weed attains added lustre. However it will spread from the best kept lower beds by dogs running about. Bouquets are brought home and the weed is watered and caressed, thus insuring the ripening of seeds, after which the bouquets are dedicated to waste baskets or backyards.

"Clipping of plants after the blooming stage assists nature to invigorate the roots which live over winter. Thus the weed is assisted in its insatiable greed and in its orgy of spreading.

"The ox-eye daisy along with most of our weeds is an immigrant from Europe where hills and valleys are covered with this weed and is causing an annual loss to farmers and gardeners running into millions of dollars.

"Laws have been enacted in the old world against this enemy which are strictly enforced. Sir Grierson, a nobleman of Scotland some two hundred years ago used to hold Chrysanthemum courts where any tenant having more than three heads of weeds in his field was fined. Early settlers of the New England states harbored the ox-eye daisy because of its deceptive lustre and we are getting this weed into our state partly through the same foolish sentiment as well as from dirty grass seeds, unrelieved off by unfair seed dealers. The ox-eye daisy has functioned as a matrimonial talisman and as a result it has escaped the weed book.

"One single plant of the daisy is said to produce up to 5,000 seeds. Its tenacious roots devour every vestige of plantfood and will crowd out other plants. Shallow plowing in August with thorough cultivation from time to time until frost will suppress it. It will not give much trouble under short crop rotation. The cleaning of seed is most essential."

CLAIM INVESTIGATORS PERJURED SELVES

Washington, July 19.—(UP)—Two leading investigators with the Citizens Service association, formed here to "put a dry spy in every block," are under arrest charged with perjury.

Government agents declared the two swore falsely that they obtained liquor from a policeman. The agents added that 25 liquor law cases pressed by the pair would be dropped.

The men arrested are Charles D. Davis, 28, and Jesse J. Hall, 22. Davis was recently credited by the association with backing 200 dry law complaints.

MADE FIRE CHIEF, FIRE INSPECTOR

Deciding Vote by Mayor Little Places
H. McGinn in
New Post

MAYOR PRESENTS VIEWS

City Engineer Instructed to Make Necessary Repairs to
City Streets

Fire chief and fire inspector was the new job given H. McGinn, head of the Brainerd Fire Department last evening by the city council as a result of the decision of Mayor Frank E. Little to whom was given the final vote in the matter after the council at the previous meeting had deadlocked on the issue.

Chief McGinn started his duties this morning at a salary of $95 a month.

Mayor Little submitted the following communication in which he gave his decision:

"The matter of the appointment of H. McGinn, now serving as fire chief of the City of Brainerd, as fire chief and fire inspector at a salary of $95.00 a month having been referred to me with a request that I cast a vote in accord with Section 17 of the city charter of the City of Brainerd, I submit the following:

"A view of the record in the office of the city clerk shows that a petition signed by one hundred eighty citizens of the city of Brainerd was duly presented to the council, asking that the office of fire inspector be continued and that such office be combined with that of fire chief. The matter was referred to the finance committee and fire, light and water committee, which committee did on June 6, 1927, make its report to the council, recommending that Mr. McGinn be employed as fire chief and fire inspector at a salary not to exceed $100.00 per month. Alderman V. F. Anderson made the report as chairman of the committee and when Aldermen M. Anderson and Hall moved that the report be rejected, Aldermen V. F. Anderson and Lyons voted in opposition to such motion. The matter was again taken up by the council at its meeting on June 20, at which meeting Aldermen V. F. Anderson and Lyons voted with the other aldermen who have favored the creation of this office of fire chief and fire inspector. A committee from the fire department also appeared before the city council, recommending the employment of Mr. McGinn as fire chief and fire inspector, making such recommendation on the ground that such appointment would increase the efficiency of the fire department, reduce fire hazards and tend to comply with requirements for the reduction of insurance rates.

"So far as I have been able to find in the records, there has been no opposition with the exception of the four votes from the council, while there has been a petition from citizens, a recommendation of a special committee appointed to investigate the matter, a committee of firemen, and apparently a majority of the council, in favor of such appointment. I have referred particularly to the vote of V. F. Anderson and Mr. Lyons for the reason that these two aldermen were absent from the meeting of the council on July 5, and I have cited their action in order to show my grounds for the belief that the appointment would have carried had all members been present at the meeting on July 5.

"For the above reasons I cast my vote in favor of the appointment of H. McGinn as fire chief and fire inspector at a salary of $95.00 a month."

The city engineer was instructed to make the necessary repairs to city streets required at this time.

A report of the audit of the Strand, Roe and Johnson Co., of the city books was received which showed that all the city books were in first class condition.

Alderman Martin Anderson reported on the leakage in electric light lines and on motion the matter was referred to the fire, light and water committee to take up with the water and light board.

The contract of meals for prisoners in the city jail was awarded to the New Brainerd Cafe at 30 cents a meal.

BIDS WANTED

Contracts will be placed for brushing and trenching approximately 4 miles of right of way around our Brainerd-Oak Lawn muskrat ranch on highway No. 2, 10 miles East of Brainerd. GABBY HARTNETT DELIVERS A MOST TIMELY HOME RUN

GIVES CHICAGOANS 6 TO 4 VICTORY OVER NEW YORK YANKEES YESTERDAY

CUBS LOSE GAME AND LEAGUE LEADERSHIP TO THE PIRATES

(By United Press)
Yesterday's hero—Gabby Hartnett, catcher for the Chicago Cubs, whose home run in the tenth inning with Grimm on base gave the Chicagoans a 6-4 victory over New York in the first game of a double header.

The Cubs lost the second game, 3-2, and thereby lost the league leadership to Pittsburgh. The Pirates won a twin bill.

The second game was also won with a home run when Harper hit for the circuit with a mate on to give the Giants a 3-2 victory.

The hard hitting Pittsburgh Pirates regained leadership in the National League by defeating Philadelphia twice, 9-7 and 6-5. Aldridge and Yde were necessary to take the Phillies in the opener but Meadows held Philadelphia in the second game. Cy Williams hit his third home run in as many days and ran his season's total to 19.

Buster Gehrig hit his thirty-first home run of the season—thereby going into one home run leadership over Babe Ruth—as the Yankees defeated St. Louis, 10-6. It was the tenth victory of the season for the Yankees over the Browns. St. Louis has not won a game from New York this year.

Four runs in the first inning gave Detroit sufficient margin to win handily from Philadelphia, 5-3. Gibson had the better of a pitching battle with Grove. Ty Cobb ran his all-time total of hits to 4,000 when he doubled in the first inning.

Young Hadley, Washington pitcher, held Chicago to six hits while the Comiskeymen were being defeated, 5-1. Blankenship was ineffective against the Senators, permitting thirteen blows.

Critz' single in the tenth, with an error by Gibson, permitted Pipp to score with the run that gave Cincinnati a 3-2 victory over Boston. Critz also pounded in the other two Red runs when he homered in the fourth after Ford had singled.

Boston and Cleveland divided a double bill, the Red Sox taking the first game, 14-5, and the Indians the second, 4-0. Summa was the hitting hero with seven hits out of eight times at bat. He got four singles and a double out of five times up in the first game and a double and single in three times up in the second.

Kansas City, Mo. — A triple by Hauser started an eighth inning drive which netted Kansas City three runs and brought the team from behind to defeat Indianapolis, 7 to 5. It was Sheehan's thirteenth victory of the season.

Minneapolis, Minn. — The offerings of Zumbro and Harris, Columbus hurlers, proved to the liking of Minneapolis and the Millers massed their fifteen hits to win, 12 to 6. Ellison hit a home run for Minneapolis with the bases full.

Milwaukee, Wis. — Riffe's triple, scoring Gaffney and Holley's single bringing in Riffe broke up a struggle between Milwaukee and Louisville in the eleventh inning and gave the Colonels a 12-10 victory. Riconda hit a home run for the Brewers. Thirty-one players entered the game.

St. Paul, Minn. — Toledo collected only four hits off St. Paul while the Saints hammered out ten, but Toledo won, 6 to 5. Six Toledoans took first base on walks and three more went to the initial sack on errors. Five of the Saints' hits were good for two bases.

GABBY HARTNETT DELIVERS A MOST TIMELY HOME RUN

GIVES CHICAGOANS 6 TO 4 VICTORY OVER NEW YORK YESTERDAY

CUBS LOSE GAME AND LEAGUE LEADERSHIP TO THE PIRATES

(By United Press)
Yesterday's hero—Gabby Hartnett, catcher for the Chicago Cubs, whose home run in the tenth inning with Grimm on base gave the Chicagoans a 6-4 victory over New York in the first game of a double header.

The Cubs lost the second game, 3-2, and thereby lost the league leadership to Pittsburgh. The Pirates won a twin bill.

The second game was also won with a home run when Harper hit for the circuit with a mate on to give the Giants a 3-2 victory.

The hard hitting Pittsburgh Pirates regained leadership in the National League by defeating Philadelphia twice, 9-7 and 6-5. Aldridge and Yde were necessary to take the Phillies in the opener but Meadows held Philadelphia in the second game. Cy Williams hit his third home run in as many days and ran his season's total to 19.

Buster Gehrig hit his thirty-first home run of the season—thereby going into one home run leadership over Babe Ruth—as the Yankees defeated St. Louis, 10-6. It was the tenth victory of the season for the Yankees over the Browns. St. Louis has not won a game from New York this year.

Four runs in the first inning gave Detroit sufficient margin to win handily from Philadelphia, 5-3. Gibson had the better of a pitching battle with Grove. Ty Cobb ran his all-time total of hits to 4,000 when he doubled in the first inning.

Young Hadley, Washington pitcher, held Chicago to six hits while the Comiskeymen were being defeated, 5-1. Blankenship was ineffective against the Senators, permitting thirteen blows.

Critz' single in the tenth, with an error by Gibson, permitted Pipp to score with the run that gave Cincinnati a 3-2 victory over Boston. Critz also pounded in the other two Red runs when he homered in the fourth after Ford had singled.

Boston and Cleveland divided a double bill, the Red Sox taking the first game, 14-5, and the Indians the second, 4-0. Summa was the hitting hero with seven hits out of eight times at bat. He got four singles and a double out of five times up in the first game and a double and single in three times up in the second.

Kansas City, Mo. — A triple by Hauser started an eighth inning drive which netted Kansas City three runs and brought the team from behind to defeat Indianapolis, 7 to 5. It was Sheehan's thirteenth victory of the season.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The offerings of Zumbro and Harris, Columbus hurlers, proved to the liking of Minneapolis and the Millers massed their fifteen hits to win, 12 to 6. Ellison hit a home run for Minneapolis with the bases full.

Milwaukee, Wis. — Riffe's triple, scoring Gaffney and Holley's single bringing in Riffe broke up a struggle between Milwaukee and Louisville in the eleventh inning and gave the Colonels a 12-10 victory. Riconda hit a home run for the Brewers. Thirty-one players entered the game.

St. Paul, Minn.—Toledo collected only four hits off St. Paul while the Stars hammered out ten, but Toledo won, 6 to 5. Six Toledoans took first base on walks and three more went to the initial sack on errors. Five of the Saints' hits were good for two bases.

Famous Sacred River

Jordan is the name of the well known sacred river of Palestine. It rises in the north among the foothills of the Lebanon mountains, and flowing southward in a very sinuous course, passes through the sea of Galilee or Tiberias, reaches the Dead Sea, which is 1,316 feet below the level of the Mediterranean sea. The length of the River Jordan is 120 miles.
